Local jobbers declars mackerel is a good buy for any merchant at the present time; that while prices are high in comparison with former years, in a few months they will look cheap. The catch of domered ish is practically a failure and the Norway catch is about half the usual. Prices have been advancing rapidly for two of three weeks. No prices have been named on fall caught Irish yet, and it looks as though the market would open $7 to $3 a barrel higher than last year's opening. The demand for Holland herring is heavy, and although the catch is much larger than last year there are no surplus stocks. Codfish is high and will continue to be higher for genuine eastern caught lish.

Peaches have shown a 12 cent advance with most sellers and as high as I cent per pound with others. Seeded raisins have advanced I cent per pound and prunes another is cent, with further advances in sight. It is impossible to say where the end of these advances is to be. The raisin packers contend that prices are not yet as high as they will go and that these prices are caused by absolute searcity of the material. In prunes, two of the heavy shippers seem to be taking in the available supply, believing that the goods are much lower than the market justifies and that the spread between prines and other dried fruits is altogether too great.
