Albeits a peeds have been partially met, but there must be a complete reorganization of the governments system, as I have before indicated to you. I ask your especial attention to this. Our fellow citizens who dwell on the shores of Fuget sound with characteristic energy are arranging to hold in Seattle the Alaska Yukon Pacific exposition. Its special sims include the upbuilding of Alaska and the development of American commerce on the Pacific ocean. This exposition, in its purpose and scope, should appai not only to the people of the Pacific slope, but to the people of the United States at large. Alaska since it was hought has yielded to the government fil, 600,000 or revenue and has produced nearly $300,000,000 in sold, furs and fish. ment official, whether of the nation or of the several states.

I am prompted to say this by the attitude of hostility here and there assumed toward the Japanese in this country. This hostility is sporadic and is limited to a very few places. Nevertheless, it is most discreditable to us as a people, and it may be fraught with the gravest consequences to the nation. The friendable between the United States and Japan has been continuous since the time, over half a century ago when Commodore Perry, by his expedition to Japan, first opened the Islands to west, ern civilization. Since then the growth or Japan has been literally astounding. There is not only nothing to parallel it, but nothing to pa

Tranquility.

The United States navy is the surest guarantor of peace which this country possesses. It is earnestly to be wished that we would profit by the teachings of history in this matter. A strong and wise people will study its own failures no less than its triumphs, for there is wisdom to be learned from the study of both, of the mistake as well as of the success. For this purpose nothing could be more instructive than a rational study of the war of 1812, as it is told, for instance, by Captain Mahan. There was only one way in which that war could have been avoided. If during the preceding twelve years a navy relatively as strong as that which this country now has had been built up, and an army provided relatively as good as that which the country now has, there never would have been the slightest necessity of fighting the war; and if the necessity of fighting the war; and if the necessity had arisen the war would, under such vircumstances, have ended with our speedy and overwhelming triumph. But our people, during those twelve years, refused to make any preparations whatever, regarding either the army or the navy. They saved a million or two dollars by so doing; and in mere money puld a hundredfold for each million they thus saved during the three years of war which followed—a war which brought untoid suffering upon our people, which at one time threatened the gravest national disaster, and which, in spite of the necessity of waging it, resulted merely in what was in effect a drawn battle, while the balance of defeat and triumph was almost even.

I do not ask that we continue to inocean of the orient. We wish, as we ought to wish, for a great commercial development in our dealings with Asia, and it is out of the queetion that we should permanently have such development unless we freely and gladly extend to other nations the same measure of justice and good treatment which we expect to receive in return. It is only a very small body of our citizens that act badly. Where the federal government has power it will deal summarily with any such. Where the several states have power I earnestly ask that they also deal wisely and promptly with such conduct, or else this small body

Needs of the Schools.

In both the army and the navy there is urgent need that everything possible should be done to maintain the highest standard for the personnel, alike as regards officers and the enlisted mens I do not believe that in any service there is a finer body of enlisted men and of junior officers than we have in both the army and the navy, including the Marine corps. All possible ensouragement to the enlisted men should be given, in pay and otherwise, and everything practicable done to render the service attractive to men of the right type. They should be held to the strictest discharge of their duty, and in them a spirit should be encouraged which demands not the mere performance of duty, but the performance of far more than duty, if it conduces to the honor and the interest of the American nation; and in return the amplest consideration should be theirs.

West Point and Annapolis already turn out excellent officers. We do not need to have these schools made more scholastic. On the contrary, we should never lose sight of the fact that the aim of each school is to turn out a man who shall be above everything else a fighting man. In the army in particular it is not necessary that either the cavairy or infantry officer should have special mathematical ability. Probably in both schools the best part of the education is the high standard of character and of professional morale which it confers.

But in both services there is urgent need Dut in both services there is urgent need for the establishment of a principle of solection which will eliminate men after a scertain age if they cannot be promoted from the subordinate ranks, and which will bring into the higher ranks, and which will these at an earlier age. This principle of selection will be objected to by good men of medicire capacity who are fitted to do well whan at an advanced age they come into positions, but who are not fitted to do well whan at an advanced age they come into positions of command and of great responsibility. But the desire of these men to be promoted to positions which they are not competent to fill should not weigh against the interests of the havy and the country. At present our men, especially in the mavy, are kept far too long in the juntor grades, and then, at much too advanced an age, are put quickly through the senior grades until they are too old to be of real use in them; and, if they are of real use, being put through them so quickly that little benefit to the navy comes from their having been in them at all.

Advantage of the Navy.

Advantage of the Navy.

The navy has one great advantage over the army in the fact that the officers of high rank are actually trained in the continual performance of their duties, that is, in the management of the battleships and armored cruisers gathered into fleets. This is not true of the army officers, who risely have corresponding chances, to exercus command over troops under service conditions. The conduct of the Spanish war showed the iamentable loss of life, the useless extravagance and the inefficiency certain to result if during peace the high officials of the War and Navy departments are praised and rewarded only if they save money at no matter what cost to the efficiency of the service, and if the higher officers are given no chance whateve to exercise and practice command. For years prior to the Spanish war the secretaries of war were praised chiefly if they practiced economy, which occurrents was directly responsible for most of the mismangement that occurred in the war itself—and parenthetically he it observed that the very people who clamored for the mismangement that occurred in the war itself—and parenthetically he it observed that the very people who clamored for the mismangement for our coast defenses; these men should be of the right type and properly trained; and there should therefore be an increase of pay for certain skilled grades, especially in the coast artillery. Money should be appropriated to permit troops to be massed in hody and exercised in maneuvers, particularly in marching. Such ex trice during the summer last peaced has been of increase of pay for certain skilled grades, especially in the coast artillery. Money should be appropriated to permit troops to be massed in hody and exercised in maneuvers.

value to the two services, and they co-operate with constantly increasing efficiency and importance.

The congress has most wisely provided for a national board for the promotion of rifle practice. Excellent results have already come from this law, but it does not go far enough. Our regular army is so small that in any great war we should have to trust mainly to volunteers, and in such event these volunteers should already know how to shoot, for if a soldier has the fighting edge and ability to take care of himself in the open his efficiency on the line of battle is almost directly proportionate to excellence in marksmanship. We should establish shooting galleries in all the large public and military schools; should maintain national target ranges in different parts of the country and should in every way encourage the formation of rifle clubs throughout all parts of the land. The little republic of Switzerland offers us an excellent example in all matters connected with building up an efficient citizen soldiery. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The concluding sections of the president's nessage are devoted principally to a review of Secretary Root's trip to the south and Central American countries, with a discussion of the congress that met at Rio de Janeiro. Mr. Roosevelt finds much encouragement in the reception accorded to Secretary Root and the general indications of a friendly regard for the United States of American among other American governments. A discussion of the Drago doctrine, as considered at the Rio conference is included in this. The necessity of cultivating a closer commercial relationship with these countries is pointed out.

Twice as Much Imposed on Last Violators of Sunday Closing Law as First.

Fines of $50 and costs were assessed against two saloon men, Joe Calabria, 2060 Poppleton avenue, and B. A. Diltz, of the Thurston hotel bar, in police court Tuesday morning for selling liquor Sunday. This is just double the fine imposed on the other saloon men who were convicted of selling liquor one recent Sunday during the crusade against open saloons. The extra penalty was imposed by Judge Crawford for the reason that the saloon men had been amply notified, through the press and otherwise, that the law was to be enforced to the letter.

Calabria and Diltz pleaded guilty in the bellef that the usual fine of $25 and costs would be the penalty, and when the fine was doubled they sent up a protest. The men said it was not a square deal to fine them just double that which their fellow saloon men had been fined last week, Judge Crawford turned a deaf ear to their entreaties to reduce the fine and intimated that in future cases even heavier fines would be assessed.
