ATTORNEY GENERAL REPORTS

Mr. Moody Tells of Work of His Office During Year.

DESIRES PAROLE SYSTEM ESTABLISHED

Again Recommends Congress Give United States Right to Appeal Decisions on Law Points in Criminal Cases.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—In his annual report Attorney General Moody says: I renew the recommendation made in my last annual report for the enactment of a law giving to the United States the right of appeal upon questions of law in criminal cases, with the proviso that the appeal be taken upon the merits shall not be set aside. The congress has passed such a law for the District of Columbia and for the law of many of the states. Within the year there have been several instances showing the great public interest in the enactment of such a law. The indictment against the best packers, returned by the grand jury after several months of deliberation as the result of investigations which had been made throughout the country by the department of justice, is rendered practically useless by the ruling of the judge, not relating to the merits of the case, the prosecution being obliged to attempt to carry the case through to the supreme court.

The act approved June 1, 1888, which provided for the amicable settlement of controversies between carriers and their employees, in the tenth section, made it a special offense for any carrier to discriminate against any of his employees on account of his membership in a labor organization or to attempt to induce any of his employees to leave his employment after his discharge.

A demurrer to an indictment under this act has been held by the district judge on the ground that the section is unconstitutional. Even a United States commissioner has held the act unconstitutional. It is monstrous that a law which has received the assent of the senate, the house of representatives and the president, should be subject to review by the court of appeals and the supreme court.

The report takes up the matter of proceedings under the anti-trust law; gives report of cases pending, as well as those settled.

Anti-Trust Litigation. Speaking of the proceedings under this law and under the Elkins amendment, the attorney general says:

During the nearly twenty years which have elapsed since the passage of this act, there have been many attempts by combination to enforce its penalties, but either through the inefficiency of the law or for other reasons, the results have been almost uniformly unsuccessful. A careful examination discloses that there were in those years seventy-nine indictments returned by the government failed in sixty-two and succeeded in seventeen. No sentences of imprisonment were executed and the total fines amounted to $12,728. It is safe to say that these figures disclose a very large measure of dereliction from the commission of prohibited offenses, a singular fact.

But in 1906 the so-called Elkins law was passed. This law very much strengthened the hands of the government in dealing with discriminatory practices of railroads. It made it unlawful for any carrier to receive any rebate or discrimination whereby property, by any device, is transported at a lower rate than the published rate. It also conferred upon the government the right to apply to the court to compel the observance of published rates and the continuance of discrimination. Of course, all the indictments under this act have been during the present administration, for it was not in existence before.

Cases Started. It had been claimed, after the passage of the Elkins act, that rebates and other unlawful discriminations had practically ceased. The Interstate Commerce commission in 1905, in its annual report, stated that the practice had greatly diminished, but that it still existed in railroad operations and that never before had facts been so well observed as at that time. In testimony before the senate committee considering the railway rate legislation during the spring and summer of 1906 many officials of the railroads expressed the opinion that rebates had stopped, but evidence coming to the department of justice during the summer and the autumn was convincing to give aid the shippers to receive rebates and that by other devices which were not covered by the Elkins act to a very considerable extent.

It secured, however, evidence that an attempt was being made to circumvent the law by the use of a device known as the "dummy" or "straw" company. Accordingly, in October, 1906, when the situation was first fully ascertained, the department of justice was advised of the existence of such a device. In October, 1906, when the situation was first fully ascertained, the department of justice was advised of the existence of such a device.

The report closes with statement of conditions in various penal institutions of the United States and the District of Columbia, and mention of exhibits accompanying the report, including that of the attorney general of Porto Rico, bankruptcy matters, librarial and similar matters.

BOYCOTT CASE IS DECIDED
Connecticut Judge Holds Haters Not Guilty Under Terms of Sherman Law.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 8.—The long-pending Danbury boycott suit brought by Dietrich E. Loewe and Martin Fuchs against Martin Lawlor and others has been settled. Judge Platt of the United States district court dismissed the complaint, which was a demurrer to the complaint. The plaintiffs allege the defendants were illegally using their label and that a combination had been formed to limit the plaintiffs' trade. It was also alleged that the defendants endeavored to unroll the plaintiffs' factory and failing to do so declared a boycott upon hats made by the plaintiff, which were found in the hands of plaintiffs' customers in other states than Connecticut, notably California and Virginia.

Judge Platt's opinion declares that while it is obvious that the defendants sought to curtail and if possible destroy the plaintiff's production of hats and its distribution of the product there is no allegation suggesting that the means of transporting the product or the product itself, in transportation was "touched, handled, obstructed or in any manner actually interfered with," and that "there is no allegation that the defendants are in any way engaged in interstate commerce."

"The real question is," says the opinion, "whether a combination, which undertakes to interfere simultaneously with both acts, is one which directly affects the transportation of the hats from the place of manufacture to the place of sale."

The judge does not find that the supreme court has as yet so broadened the interpretation of the Sherman act as to fit such an order of facts as the Lawlor case presents.

G. A. R. TO HOLD MEETING
Executive Committee May Change Place of Meeting at Session in January.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 8.—A meeting of the executive committee of the Grand Army of the Republic has been called by Commander-in-Chief R. R. Brown at Zanesville, O., January 7, at which definite consideration of the location of the national encampment next year will be taken up.

The national encampment of 1907 voted to meet next year at Saratoga, N. Y., but it is understood conditions necessary to the encampment have not been met by that city, although an extension of time was granted, and the location of the encampment at another city is a possibility.

Fortune Teller Held.
CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Ferman Block, the fortune teller who was arrested in connection with the deaths in the Vivaldi family, was arraigned today in the municipal court and his case was continued until December 12. His wife was also brought into court and hearing in her case was set for December 12.

STORET WRITES A LETTER

Former Ambassador at Vienna Makes Public Letter from President.

ACTIVITY AT VATICAN OBJECTIONABLE

Senators and Cabinet Officers Receive Epistle from Deposed Diplomat Regarding Matter Which Caused His Dismissal.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—The Chicago Tribune in its Washington dispatches today says that an extraordinary letter has been addressed by Bellamy Storer to President Roosevelt and the members of his cabinet.

The letter, which was received by the president, was addressed to the president, the secretary of state and the members of his cabinet.

Mr. Storer was dismissed because of his wife's supposed interference of affairs of the Roman Catholic church and her alleged misuse of letters from the president.

It was also charged that Mrs. Storer had meddled with French politics by taking part in an anti-republican intrigue to promote the marriage of Victor Bonaparte with a member of the Orleans family.

Both of these charges Mr. Storer denies, and, on the other hand, declares that the president's interest in a cardinal was not due to Storer or to Storer's wife, but to the president alone.

The text of Mr. Storer's letter was printed and transmitted not only to the president, but also to members of the foreign relations committee of the senate.

Mr. Storer says that his removal in no summary manner, suddenly dismissed from an office which he had been given reason to believe he had filled to the satisfaction both of his own government and of that to which he was assigned, was a "touch, handled, obstructed or in any manner actually interfered with," and that "there is no allegation that the defendants are in any way engaged in interstate commerce."

"The real question is," says the opinion, "whether a combination, which undertakes to interfere simultaneously with both acts, is one which directly affects the transportation of the hats from the place of manufacture to the place of sale."

The judge does not find that the supreme court has as yet so broadened the interpretation of the Sherman act as to fit such an order of facts as the Lawlor case presents.

Feeling of Persons. The correspondence above which would give these letters their true character or show that they were an angry complaint because what he had directed to be done had become known—these things, with the abusive personal characterization of my wife, the assumed indignation with which had been in fact permitted and encouraged where not expressly directed, seemed to me to put the letter outside of limit of anything justifiable even in a stranger. What a sense of outraged friendship it aroused in us can perhaps be understood by any one who has read even the small part of the private correspondence given above.

In concluding his letter, which is dated at Cincinnati, November, 1906, the former ambassador says: "I write this letter without the knowledge of Archbishop Ireland."

Statement by Storer. CINCINNATI, Dec. 8.—When Bellamy Storer was shown the dispatches from Chicago detailing the substance of his communication to President Roosevelt, he said: "I have not one word to add to the dispatch. I merely wish to state that the letter was given to the press without my knowledge or consent and against my inclination. I may say that all the copies of the letter sent out were clearly marked 'private' and if the letter was given to the press from the White House my hands are clean in the matter."

A Bold Step. To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret, medicinal compounds, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a bold departure from the usual course pursued by the makers of put-up medicines for domestic use, and so has published broadcast and openly to the whole world, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines. Thus he has taken his numerous patrons and patients into his full confidence. Thus too he has removed all the doubts and suspicions which are naturally engendered by the use of medicines of doubtful merit, and made them Remedies of Known Composition.

By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his medicines are of such a character that they are not only safe, but also of the highest medicinal value. He has also shown that his medicines are of such a character that they are not only safe, but also of the highest medicinal value.

Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Great Peppermint Cure, his famous medicine for weak stomach, torpid liver or biliousness and all catarrhal diseases, however located, have printed upon it, in plain English, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his medicines, but he has also published broadcast and openly to the whole world, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines. BATTLESHIP VERMONT TESTED

New Vessel Successfully Undergoes All Official Trials Under Most Adverse Conditions.

BOSTON, Dec. 8.—The battleship Vermont from the yards of the Fore River Shipbuilding and Engine company of Quincy, successfully completed all government trials at sea this afternoon.

The trials were held under the most severe conditions yet undergone by a government vessel and the requirements were all completed within four days, which is the shortest period in which a battleship has been put through its paces.

The requirements called for an average of eighteen knots at full power and 13.30-knot power at two-thirds speed.
