DEAR OLE LUNNUN YE KNOW Damp Air and Low Clouds Remind Englishmen of Those Beastly

"By Jove, this is something like life," said the Englishman, who was a guest at the Paxton hotel, coming in from a walk. "Been having some of our American bar room masterpieces?" inquired the clerk. "Aw, now you're trying to spoof me you know," said he of the accent. "No, but, you know. I've been our walking in the damp air. My word, it almost could be called a fog. If I hadn't spent most of me life in dear old Lunnon, I believe I would "I'd call it a fog," said the cierk.

"Aw, to be sure you would, but then, you know, you've never been in Lunnon. Yes. I walked down here on the bridge over the river, you know, and standing there I could almost imagine I was on old Blackfriars' bridge. And I imagined a big brewery up north was the dome of St. Paul's and the smelter there, the Thames embankment. It really made me homesick for a moment when I came back to life and thought how far away it all is.

"Hut I've certainly enjoyed this bit of fog. Walking along the streets I could almost imagine I was back in the dear old streets with the dear old slush clinging to me boots and the dear old drops of dew forming on me hat and top coat. "I 'ad began to think you 'ad a beastly climate here with nothing but sunshine and JEFFERSON CITY. Mo. Dec. 13.—Attorney General Hadley today filed in division No. 2 of the supreme court a motion for the rehearing of the anti-pool selling law supreme court decision rendered last week in the case of Charles Oldham of Kansus City, who registered bets on races held at Eim Ridge track by means of telephone to the state of Kansas. The attorney general contends that the decision is in conflict with the act of the legislature of 186.
