

For and About Women Folks

Preparedness of Women.
 "There's one thing," said the coarsant beautician, "that shows the difference between the masculine and feminine makeup. It's the way that men and women approach the matter of giving Christmas presents. As a matter of fact men don't approach it at all. They just leap into it when it's impossible to avoid it further. But your true woman, who at times is a thoughtful woman, never has gifts out of her mind for a day or so at a time. Christmas and birthdays serve only as outlets for her, she is in a state of constant preparation for them."
 "Last July I was on one of my infrequent shopping tours with her. One of the first things she said was: 'There's just the right neck piece for Aunt Molly.' I remarked that I didn't know Aunt Molly was my special need of fur in midsummer. My wife looked at me scornfully. 'Why, if I didn't start getting my Christmas presents now,' she replied, 'where would I be in December?' Naturally, I had nothing to say in return."
 "And as for making things! Bless your heart, the women are always making things for each other. They have the law of association better developed than we have; they know what people need, and what's more, they act upon the knowledge. I've got a good many men friends, I'm glad to say, and I suppose I know their tastes in a general way, but I'd be scared to death to buy anything for any one of them. They feel the same about me, I guess, but my wife knows just the thing for each one of the relatives or women friends that she remembers—at least that's what they all say. In their notes, she writes:
 "It's a genius, that's what it is, this faculty of gift making. The woman has it and we haven't, that's the fact. The few days before Christmas are like a nightmare to me, and I'd be lost entirely at that festive season if I hadn't my wife to help me out. There's one thing, though, in which she can't be of any assistance, and that's the getting of a present for her that will be just what she wants and a surprise to boot. And my efforts to get this desideratum aren't helped any by the positive knowledge that she has had my present selected upon and picked out weeks or months ahead."

Advice for Bachelor Girls.
 A Boston girls' club has formulated these rules for the guidance of the girl who is not married:
 "Don't be aggressive about it and insist that you never yet met a man you would dream of marrying. Even if this is true, your vigorous assertions will leave the opposite impression on the minds of your hearers."
 "Don't belittle your present male acquaintances by hitting and dreaming with a persistence all the virtues as he has."
 "Don't drop vague hints about a secret engagement which time alone will divulge."
 "Don't pretend you don't believe in love; no one will believe this, either."
 "Don't try to give the impression that you are wavering between a number of brilliant offers and can't decide which to accept."
 "And don't, above all things, make transparent remarks about a girl's losing her freedom if she marries under 25. Such an opinion is for girls in their teens."
 "Better decide to say nothing about it at all. If some one comes at you with the unparliamentary blunt question, 'Have you ever met a man you could care for?' don't cast down your eyes and give a sentimental sigh. Look your outrageous questioner straight in the face and answer cheerfully, 'Hundreds of times,' and the chances are you and your affairs will be left in peace by that person at all events."
 "Endeavor to show people that you really enjoy life as you are—not by talking about it but by a cheerful, sunny demeanor and a busy life with lots of friends and a reasonable amount of amusement."

Quarter of a Million for Clothes.
 Miss Gullia Morsini, daughter of a New York banker, is regarded as the "most sumptuous dresser" in the metropolis. She spends nearly $250,000 a year for clothes. "I dress the very best that my taste and my fortune allow for two reasons," she said in a New York World interview. "The first is the woman's reason, though I feel ashamed when I say it. I like to look well. All women do. The other reason—and there are people who are unkind enough to criticize me for it—is that it is the best way I know of to do good with the money which fortune has so kindly bestowed upon me."
 "I can be frank about it. I try to spend as much as I can upon my clothes. Every year I try to spend more than I spent the year before. This year I am planning to spend $200,000 for my clothes, and I don't think for a moment that I am a bit extravagant or wicked."
 "How can I manage to spend so much for clothes? Easiest thing in the world. There are plenty of ways nowadays in which women can make the thousands go for dress."
 "Where I buy many of my dresses there are hundreds of young girls employed. When it comes close to Christmas time, the very time when it should never, never happen, many of them are dismissed. Why? Simply because the women of New York who have so much money they don't know what to do with it, won't order more than ten or a dozen dresses for a season. They prefer to keep their money and take it with them after they are going."
 "A woman can't have too many gowns."
 "A thousand dollars for a dress isn't such a great price in pay. I've had plenty that cost more, and I'm glad of it—glad that I could pay that much. Of that $1,000, something like $50 has gone to people all over the world who work for a living. I am glad that I have the $1,000 to share with them."
 "On the other hand, it would be sheer nonsense to spend $100 for every dress one wears. The best reason is that many women make a practice of never wearing the same gown twice during a season, and never more than three or four times."
 "They are not worn out then. What do you do with them? I give mine away to other women not so blessed as I am. What do some other women do? They sell their gowns. I have tried to make it a practice to buy, never to sell."
 "Today the well-dressed woman must have absolute harmony in everything she wears. Her shoes, stockings, hats, gloves, everything must match her gown. For each gown she must have its own pair of shoes. My shoes cost $50 a pair. The leather is imported. It is colored to match the shade of my dress and then made by hand into a pair of shoes. Think how many persons have honorable employment before that pair of shoes is finished and delivered to me."

 "I can't see why $2,000 is too much for one's shoe bill a year. That only allows for forty pairs."
 "For my? Just as important as the dress itself. They sell so quickly that one must have many, many pairs. They must match the costume, of course. A thousand a year seems very much for gloves, yet there are many women who spend that much for their gloves alone. Handkerchiefs are just as necessary and they will cost as much in a year as gloves cost."
 "No, no; I am not the best dressed woman in New York, nor am I anywhere near it. Neither do I spend more money than any other woman. But if you must know it, I do try to dress well without spending a dollar, and I think that other women should try to do the same thing, if they have been blessed by fortune as I have."

New Trick in Fur Selling.
 Two men, about 25 and 28 years old respectively, affecting an English accent and the dress of petty officers, visited Abraham Greenberg, a lawyer, who has an office in the Fulton building, relates the New York Times. They were accompanied by a negro who carried a large sailor's grip. The men represented themselves as having just returned from a trip through the Baltic provinces of Russia.
 The lawyer said he would like to see a pair of fur, but the man persisted. He displayed a handsome bearskin rug which he said he would sell for $75. Greenberg didn't care to purchase any furs, but the rug impressed him so much that he finally offered $25 for it. This was refused, but the man produced a fine silver blue fox muff and collar. "I'll tell you have this for $600," said the man.
 Greenberg bargained with him and eventually bought the set for $30. He thought he had a good bargain.
 Just as he was about to hand the money to the stranger he found that the muff was damaged. The man readily agreed to exchange it and took what looked like a similar muff from the grip. This looked all right and was accepted.
 When the lawyer examined the muff and collar more carefully, however, on rubbing his hand gently over the fur it began to fall out. Greenberg took the garments to an expert and learned that they were made of hair dyed and tanned crudely on a foundation. The value of the garments was about $150.
 Since then the lawyer has heard from other victims of the pair. Their game, which is a new one, is being worked successfully in many parts of the city.

Trials of Woman Mountain Climber.
 Miss Annie Peck, who climbs mountains for fun and who has probably been higher up in the world than any other American woman, is back in New York from Peru, a knowledge of herself repelled, but not beaten by the peak Huascar. Twice she attempted to reach the summit of this, the loftiest of the Andes, and twice she failed. She says she will try again.
 To climb this unexplored volcanic peak, which bears the name of one of the Incas, of the ancient Peruvian empire, relates the New York Sun, has been the ambition of Miss Peck since she made her first trip through the Andes several years ago. Last May she left New York determined to place a little silk American flag on the summit of the patriarch of the Andes.
 With an outfit chosen through her experience as a mountain climber, Miss Peck made her way into the Hualia valley, which lies at the foot of one of Huascar's spurs. Choosing two South American guides, the guides and five Indians as porters, the young woman set out in the early part of July to climb the more than 20,000 feet to the summit of the cone.
 Miss Peck began to realize the frailties of mere man before the first 5,000 feet were achieved. One of the South Americans she had selected to accompany her was crazy—just crazy, as Miss Peck puts it—and the other was a coward. When the party found themselves far up in the wilderness of snow and glacial ice the man who was a coward quit without shame.
 The woman and the six remaining men pushed on up the white flank of the mountain. Troubles came in assorted lots. The snow blindness began to affect the Indians. Food ran short. The crazy man lost the barometer. At last the Indians struck.
 On the third day of the climbing, when 15,000 feet had been scaled, the Indians demanded three times the amount of pay Miss Peck had promised them. She refused and then all five of the porters began to take the downward path in long strides. The one woman there alone with the crazy Peruvian citizen in the cloud of waste called the Indians back and agreed to their terms.
 The upward march was again commenced, but before an hour had passed Miss Peck thought she discovered the cause for the Indians' belligerency. Six quarts of raw alcohol brought along for the purpose of heating the canned food had been absorbed by the five Indians during the progress up the mountain. Raw alcohol at the elevation of 15,000 feet began to have an effect. There were devils in the air, the Indians said, and if they gained the summit, where no man had ever set foot and where the spirit of Huascar slept, they would all be turned to stone.
 The woman gave it up. She could not go on alone and her porters refused to go on with her. Back down the mountain the party took its way.
 In August the American woman surprised the natives about the village of Yungay at the foot of Huascar by announcing that she was going to go up the mountain again. This time she chose new porters and she took double precautions against their falling her in making her choice.
 But all Indians in South America are alike, says Miss Peck; they are all just as bad as the worst of them. The second trip ended like the first. In failure. The porters were lazy, superstitious and selfish. Each insisted on eating as much as three men and they were prone to lie abed late in the mornings. To complicate things there were some places that had to be crossed that would have tried the courage of a better man than an Indian. After 15,000 feet had been climbed Miss Peck again gave it up and came down the mountain beaten.
 "I hope to climb that mountain before I give up," she said. "I believe I will. It is not absolutely unscalable, but I will have to get better guides and porters than I had. With Swiss I can do it."

An Adamless Eden.
 An Adamless Eden in Texas is the dream of Mary F. Hayden, the Chicago novelist, who is arranging to establish a colony of 1,000 women in Refugio county, Texas. She has acquired title to 5,000 acres and is at work on the plans for her colony.
 Women colonists may have Adam, but that condition cannot be avoided, but the males must be a mere patch on a stock so far as the affairs of the colony are concerned. The founder will endeavor to procure from the Texas legislature permission for women to exercise the right of suffrage in her colony, and all homes must be in the name of the wife. Everything that usually is undertaken on Texas farms will be attempted, truck farming, fruit raising, beekeeping, dairying, poultry raising and other kindred farm and ranch pursuits.
 Miss Hayden was an intimate friend of the late Frances E. Willard and was associated with her for a number of years in temperance work.
 A New England Tribune.
 No man who was bred and was in the rural sections of New England, recalls the Hartford Times, can fail to have joyous memories of the mince pie of his boyhood days. The dish inspires delightful recollections. But it doesn't taste quite as good now as it did then. Perhaps the reason is sufficiently indicated in the lines of the classic western poet:
 'The mince meat mother used she made; Such meat you cannot buy; She never had a cook book, when she raised things for her pie. With raising she was liberal; Big, just as I devoured pie. She'd smile as I devoured pie. And as my belt line grew.'
 No substitute for the old-fashioned mince pie of the country home has ever been devised. Nor is any ever likely to be. Beware of any boy who has no fondness for real mince pie. He needs careful and constant watching.

Nerves Cured by Knitting.
 "That knitting should have a beneficial effect upon the nerves sounds absurd to those of us who are outside 'the profession,' yet it is advised by many physicians nowadays.
 A woman who was on the verge of some serious nervous illness was told by her doctor to knit for two hours daily, and though she was most unbelieving, she obeyed his orders with satisfactory results.
 Just why the needles should be soothing to the jaded nerves cannot be told unless there is something hypnotic in the sameness of the action and the shining glitter of the swift-moving needles, but the proof of the pudding is in the eating.
 It has cured others and there is plenty of testimony to prove that it has, why not try it, you who are threatened with a nervous breakdown? Of one advantage you may be assured and that is it is cheap."
Teach Children to Love Dogs.
 The child who is taught to love animals and to have a dog as a companion is introduced to a friend of the truest and best kind—the kind of friendship that lasts. Have you ever had a dog? Then you don't know what pleasure can be had in his companionship in rambles, in his quiet presence in your room, his unobtrusiveness when human company would bore you; his 'always' snap his paw at himself to your mood when man or woman would jar upon you. By all means cultivate in children a love of animals, especially of 'man's best friend,' the dog.—New York Herald.
Leaves from Fashion's Notebook.
 The newest hat pins have large heads and are used as hat trimming details, in addition to fulfilling their original purpose.
 Hats covered with baby lamb are much worn, this fur being thin and supple enough to be handled as milliners handle velvet.
 Patent leather or dull kid bumps with around the top inch wide bands of cloth to match the frock are shown in many of the popular colorings and made to order to match any cloth frock.
 In the matter of footwear, high heels are no longer favored. Those who are looked up to in the art of dress wear heels which measure about an inch in depth. The most fashionable boot shows the new heel, which recedes slightly from the line of foot at the back.
 The automobile bag is a cross between a dressing case and a shopping bag. It is made in all the fashionable leathers and fitted with all the little useful articles which a woman may need even after a short spin in pursuit of luncheon or dinner.
 Figured plush is becoming popular again. It is mainly used for the creation of blouse coats. Another new fabric is putting in an appearance as a trimming for gowns, bouffants, capotes and boleros. It is known as Paisley velvet, the beautiful colorings of the Paisley shawl being daintily reproduced.
 One of the prettiest of the new face veils to be had at modest price is a fine mesh net with chenille or velvet dots at wide intervals and a border of velvet ribbon an inch or an inch and a half wide. This is far more chic than the cheap lace veil and a good lace veil is rather an expensive luxury.
 A charming evening dress for a young girl was made of white silk with small pink carnations were printed. The full skirt was finished at the hem with narrow lace bouffants, beaded with small pink carnations, while the little, full bodice, and puff sleeves were also bordered with the same.
 Terry velvet has recently been added as a millinery trimming. It is now frequently seen combined with moire, and it is to be had in lovely tones of coloring. Ostrich and pheasant feathers and paradise plumes are much in vogue now; all the smartest hats being trimmed with one or the other of these beautiful feathers.
 Paisley velvet is also much used for hat crowns. One charming example is worn with a cloth gown of noble color, which boasts of a smartly fitting waistcoat of Paisley velvet, fastened with small silver buttons. The trim of the hat is composed of moire velvet. It is trimmed with one long feather, shading from deep gray to pale pink, and a silver buckle.

Hints for the Household.
 A piece of flannel dampened with spirits of camphor will remove stains from mirrors or window glass.
 Twenty-four hours before shampooing saturate the scalp with warm olive oil. Careful grooming every night with a brush will encourage the hair to be good.
 When linoleum linings of shoes wear paint the surface with a good quality of floor varnish and allow it a longer time to dry than would be necessary for wooden floors.
 Bad soap will injure the skin, so will poor cosmetics. The nightly application of some pure, soothing cosmetic to overcome the wear and tear of the weather is absolutely necessary.
 Neckline rings of white embroidery, with buttonhole edge and initial in the center, are among the new gifts for Christmas. They are easily made and take little time compared with other pieces of embroidery.
 Red hands and red noses are often caused by sunwise use and by the use of impure soaps. Tight clothing is another cause. Wash your belts and collars very loose. Keep your hands out of hot water as much as possible. Eat lean meats, fruits and vegetables and avoid all pastry, salads, greasy foods and strong coffee.
 Christmas without holly would not be Christmas at all. Let your dining room be bright and cheer. If there is a chandelier have it hung with evergreens and holly and from that location carry long ropes of evergreen to each corner of the room, thus forming a canopy for the table. Place a bunch of holly over the corners of all large pictures. Either one or two sprays in a vase is very bright and attractive. If your dining room for some time removes all ornaments from the mantel except the clock, and at each end place bunches of holly. Fasten wreaths of green or holly at all the windows. The use of ribbons will be a decided improvement and will brighten the decorations.
 Women who do a great deal of sewing will find a little stand to hold spoons of cotton a great convenience. The only material required are a solid piece of wood, perhaps an inch thick and either round or square, for the base, and either a knitting needle or a round piece of wood some six inches long for the upright. The upright needle is used if it can be forced into the wood on the base, but in case the slender, round piece of wood is preferred it can be kept in place with a screw or long tack. This holder has places for three or four spoons of cotton, which revolves freely when you take hold on an end of the thread and begin to draw it off. The point of the holder makes a convenient resting place for a thimble. Of course, if you are of a decorative turn of mind you will sand-paper your wooden base and then paint or stain it.
