DUN'S REVIEW OF TRADE

Weather Accelerates Distribution of Reasonable Merchandise at Retail.
 TRAFFIC DIFFICULTIES BECOME SERIOUS
 Freight Blockades and Shortage of Motive Power Retard Business—Big Demand for Cotton Goods.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—R. G. Dun & Co's. Weekly Review of Trade tomorrow will say:
 Weather conditions accelerate distribution of merchandise at retail, but increased traffic difficulties, freight blockades and shortage of motive power not only retard business, but intensify serious results at some western points. Holiday trade has equalled sanguine expectations, yet this large volume has not interfered with the brisk demand for staple articles, which despite slight to such an extent that wholesale trade experiences unusual activity for the season. The only noteworthy decrease in commerce with activities a year ago appears in building permits. Most industrial work is maintained at the maximum, mills and factories having so many contracts for next year's delivery that inventories are little less than normal. Scarcely any change is recorded in prices of iron, the market having developed a little weakness in the latter part of the week, but constant receipt of new orders, and in some eastern markets the week has brought about contracts for delivery in the closing months of 1907.

In the mills report about two-thirds of next year's total output already sold. Steadiness in quotations and the absence of speculative buying has been the factors that will contribute most largely to continued activity.
 In the primary markets for textile goods the event of greatest interest is the strength of cotton and the practical impossibility of securing prompt deliveries from manufacturers. While the demands have diminished somewhat in comparison with the pressure that has been noticed for some weeks, there is still a steady inquiry, and selling agents are utterly unable to procure shipments as requested. There is little disposition to dispute quotations, as the goods can be secured, though much business has been transacted and the question is raised as to how much speculative buying has occurred. There is no export trade, aside from regular movement to South America and the island markets, although inquiries from China are reported on special lines. The opening of the woolen goods season has been sufficiently irregular to make it difficult to determine the trend of demand. Much business has been done in staple dress goods for delivery next fall at last year's prices.
 Staple farm products have fluctuated within narrow limits, no developments of importance being reported. Wheat had support of unfavourable crop news from Russia, but light grinding by domestic mills prevented any material improvement and the week was speculative activity.
 Liabilities of commercial failures thus far reported are $2,708,827, of which $2,434,830 were in manufacturing, $2,118,244 in trading and $100,753 in other commercial lines.

jected to vagaries of the weather, being prevented by low temperatures have prevailed, but backward in the east, parts of the south and in the north, where for the fullest developments. In the larger distributive lines, wholesale and jobbing business is comparatively quiet in comparison with the season, drummers being away for the holidays, while inventing is in the way. Nevertheless, some lines, cotton and woolen goods, for instance, are being ordered for spring delivery and mills in these lines are being sold and heavy spring business.
 Industrial lines are still well active. Iron and steel mills are well sold up and high prices do not deter consumers from placing orders as far in advance as the third quarter of 1907. In finished lines specifications are very heavy. The trade in general will enter the new year with the greatest momentum ever attained. Car shortage still continues to retard shipments and affected. The paucity of the former is causing much anxiety in various parts of the country, but especially in the north and west and on the Pacific coast.

DEATH RECORD.

Funeral of Mrs. Seckel.
 LOGAN, Dec. 21.—(Special.)—The funeral of Mrs. Martha M. Seckel occurred here this afternoon. Mrs. Seckel died at Omaha at the residence of Robert Purvis. The deceased was formerly a resident of this city and a landholder here. Interment was at the Logan cemetery, where her husband is buried.
 Mrs. Thomas F. Hamer.
 KEARNEY, Neb., Dec. 21.—(Special Telegram.)—Mrs. Thomas F. Hamer died at the Kearney hospital last night at the age of 28 years. Deceased was born in this city February 22, 1878, and nearly seven years ago became the wife of Mr. Hamer. Besides her husband she is survived by three sons, Francis, Thomas and Robert. She also leaves her mother, Mrs. Adah Black a brother, Donald, and four sisters, Misses Dot, Jessie and Ruth and Mrs. Eaker, all but the last named residing in this city.
 Harry Schulz.
 Harry Schulz, the proprietor of the Bee Hive store at Twenty-fourth and Lake streets, died suddenly about 6 a. m. Friday from an attack of heart failure. He is survived by a wife and one child. Mr. Schulz was a well-known merchant and was a prominent member of the Woodmen of the World and the funeral probably will be held under the auspices of that society, although definite arrangements for the funeral have not been made as yet.

CROSSCUP ON CORPORATIONS

Chicago Jurist Discusses Problem of Their Control at Springfield, Ohio.
 REFORM MUST GO TO BOTTOM OF SUBJECT
 Federal License or Prosecution of Corporations that Are Disregarding the Law Will Not Be Sufficient.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Dec. 21.—Judge Peter S. Grosscup of Chicago addressed an audience of 2,000 people at the Grand opera house this evening on "The Control of Corporations."
 The address was given under the auspices of the Commercial Club and the faculty of Wittenberg college, of which Judge Grosscup is a graduate.
 He said in part:
 I have a friend up the state who, the morning of every election day, votes his party ticket and votes it with as much publicity as the laws permit, but in the evening waits for the returns. He is full of the wish that the other party has won. There are many men in public life today who have just that kind of fealty to the president and his policies. My respect for him is not of that kind. No other individual career in recent years has so conspicuously broken into a public atmosphere that had been stagnant, clearing it up as an electrical storm clears up a sultry summer sky. In the character of a great moral force, I look upon Mr. Roosevelt as one of the great figures of the times in which we live. To no other individual has been given so great an opportunity to lay down the foundations on which our country's future peace and prosperity must rest; to the extent that he is effectively using that opportunity—getting results out of the popular awakening—I follow him as my leader. But like every great man in the crisis of a great career, the president stands now at a point where it will be speedily determined whether foundations that go deep enough to sustain the new great industrial life on which America has entered are to be laid by him, leaving it to his successors to carry up the superstructure, or whether he is to go off the stage the great vessel, but an evangel only, of the future that waits us.
 Where Danger Lies.
 The danger that threatens him is the old, old danger that lurks in every attempt to do too many things at once and at the same time. The American people do but one thing at a time. And the one great thing that is upon this generation of Americans to settle—to settle that it will stay settled—is the ways and means through which the property and the prosperity of the country, indisputably great, and growing greater every day, shall be put on their way to becoming the property and the prosperity of the entire people of the country. When that great work is accomplished, or fairly on its way toward accomplishment, the obligation of this generation of Americans will have been discharged. But that great work will never be put on its way to accomplishment by anything less than an earnest, organized popular movement that denying to itself everything else, concentrates itself upon a particular reform, that like the great German corporation reform of thirty years ago, will go to the bottom of the wrong.
 No mere so-called federal license plan will fulfill that end; the reform to bring back the people of the country into the ownership and control of the property of the country must rest upon a corporation policy as it exists today; changed in its particular except that the corporations are to be subjected to a little additional reform in the prosecution of corporations that are disobeying the law, as the law exists today, will not fulfill that end; something more must be done with the corporation than to put it on the docket of the criminal courts.
 All the power the nation needs the nation now has. What is wanted is not more power; what is wanted is a clearer vision that at the bottom of the people's unrest is the fact that under conditions, as they exist today, the people at large are practically denied admission into the great property inheritance that all around them the genius and industry of this generation is building—a fact that ferments and will continue to ferment and will cause the whole body politic to ferment until it is removed.

 NOT AS OLD AS IT LOOKED
 Cranium of an Ancient Nebraskan Excites Investigation and Some Observations.
 The discovery of a human skull on a hillside above Florence, Neb., a few months ago, and the claim set up by the discoverer that it was a relic of an ancient race, excited considerable interest in anthropological circles and furnished a text for a paper by Henry Fairfield Osborn in the January number of the Century Magazine. Mr. Osborn discusses and compares various types of ancient man, paleolithic, neanderthal and neolithic, and concludes that the Nebraskan specimen has a large stock of centuries to its credit. "The comparisons which we are able to make," says the writer, "now prove that this cranium is of a more recent type by far than that of the neanderthal man. It may prove to be of more recent type even than that typified by the early neolithic man of Europe. Even if not of great antiquity it is certainly of very primitive type, and tends to increase rather than diminish the probability of the early advent of man in America."

The Editor of COLLIER'S WEEKLY Says:

"It has for some time been known in publishing circles that McClure's Magazine has the manuscript and documents of an elaborate, painstaking and unprejudiced history of Mrs. Eddy and Christian Science
 done with the careful regard for accuracy and adherence to documentary evidence which characterized the history of the Standard Oil Company. The publication of such a temperate history ought to settle, for those whose minds remain open on the subject, just how much of Mrs. Eddy is money-seeking charlatan and how much is seer."

The Lincoln-Douglas Debate

This story has a never-ending charm for all Americans and is told from a new point of view and in a most intimate way.
 Possibly the only Christmas story appearing in any magazine at Christmas time is the characteristic Myra Kelly story, "A Perjured Santa Claus." This question of whether or not there is a real Santa Claus gets a new angle in the story of the little boy who tried to have Santa Claus brought before the police magistrate for perjury.
 One of the contributions which will be vitally interesting will be the careful account of "The Jewish Invasion," by Burton J. Hendrick, in which is described the advent of the Jew in our country and the methods by which he obtains such eminence in commerce, literature, art or whatever he sets his hand to do.
 Other stories, papers and many good pictures make the January McClure's an epoch-maker.

A Natural Laxative

Inward cleansing is as necessary as outward bathing. To keep the bowels free and regular is of even greater importance than to keep the skin-pores from becoming clogged. The neglect of either invites disease. Everyone needs a natural laxative occasionally, to free the bowels of accumulated impurities. For this purpose take the greatest boon ever offered to those who suffer from the ills that follow constipation. For over fifty years Beecham's Pills have been famous as a stomach corrector, a liver regulator and Bowel laxative. They never grip nor cause pain. Powerful purgatives are dangerous. Avoid them. Use Beecham's Pills. They give relief without doing violence to any organ. Their action is in harmony with physical laws. Take them regularly and the necessity for their use becomes less frequent. They are a natural laxative and a positive cure for Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache and Dyspepsia.
