"Sh-h-h! It's Most Time"

Tomorrow is Monday and it's Christmas Eve.

It is, of all the three hundred and sixty five that round out the year—the most mysterious and delightful time of all. It's a night of wonderful hopes.

CHRISTMAS EVE!! A night when the lazy old Sand-man lingers on his way—when every room that holds a little cot is peopled with fairy shapes—when the perfect hearing of little children can clearly catch the silver chime of bells that older years can no longer distinguish.

It's a night when little tots as usual snuggle themselves down to dream, but long before YOU'RE ready to wake up, maybe, there'll be a scramble of little white figures—and the glorious joys of Christmas morning.

IS EVERYTHING READY?

Is there yet an empty corner in the stocking? Please don't let it hang limply—make it BULGE!

You have one day more for the purpose—that day is tomorrow—Monday.

"Eleventh hour," "last minute" buying is a strain on you; you are worried and you are nervous. We have arranged to make it all so easy and pleasant. We have the best chance in town for this, because we are supreme in shopping comfort.

We have carefully assorted, and as carefully displayed, all holiday merchandise—stocks are wonderfully complete. We have marked all prices over again, much less than before, and marked them very plainly.

We have an army of intelligent, careful clerks—quite a bunch of new ones for Monday—every one experienced. They're all at your service, ready to help you out.

Prices—bless ye—they're next-to-nothing-at-all, tomorrow, Monday.
