CHARLES E. MORGAN DEAD

Dies of Cancer of Throat After Prolonged Period of Suffering.

CONSCIOUS, BUT SPEECHLESS TO LAST

Undergoing Terrible Pain and Aware of the Inevitable, He Maintains Bright Spirit to the End.

Charles E. Morgan was relieved by death yesterday morning of an ordeal of suffering whose intensity for weeks had been almost unbearable. He died at his home and that of his parents, 1519 Cass street, of cancer of the throat. Through the long period of his excruciating agony and up to the door of death Mr. Morgan was conscious and cheerful, fully aware that the end was hastening and fully prepared to meet it. Always hopeful at the least sign of improvement, he displayed a fortitude that was wonderful in his fight for life.

"I feel that I am very near the land of peace and rest," he wrote upon a pad Sunday night, December 23, when he had emerged from a terrible ordeal of pain. He smiled. He could not speak; for months his speech had gone and he did all his conversing with a pencil and pad. This power being given him to the end. It was regarded as next to miraculous that Mr. Morgan survived the last week.

Dr. Martha J. Clark left the patient suffering only shortly Sunday night, the belief being warranted that death might come before morning.

Sketch of His Career. Charles E. Morgan was born in Johnson county, Iowa, May 20, 1857. He received his early education in the district schools of Adams county. Later his parents moved to Avoca, Ia., and then to Knox county, Nebraska, where his parents took a homestead. Mr. Morgan was graduated from the high school at Creighton, Neb., at the age of 18. He taught several terms in district schools and then moved to Omaha, where he began reading law in the office of John Wharton & Baird. He was admitted to practice law in 1884, when he was graduated from the Omaha law school, then a part of the University of Omaha.

After admission to the bar he remained with Wharton & Baird two years, after which he became a member of the law firm of Holme & Morgan. He was deputy county attorney under Howard Baldrige and deputy assistant city attorney when W. J. Connell was city attorney and J. H. Adams assistant. During May, 1903, he formed partnership with his former associate, J. H. Adams, under the firm name of Adams & Morgan. This firm secured a large practice and was joined in January, 1905, by John C. Wharton, the firm being changed to Wharton, Adams & Morgan. Mr. Morgan was an active and energetic member of the firm until September 23, 1906, when he was compelled to undergo an operation for cancer.

Mr. Morgan's political life extended over a period of ten years. For four years he was secretary of the republican city committee and was a member of the county executive committee. At a conference of republican state candidates held at Lincoln a year ago Mr. Morgan was unanimously elected treasurer of the republican state committee.

Work with Churches. Mr. Morgan was at one time a member of the Omaha Library board and was closely identified with the interests of the Young Men's Christian association, having served the association in various capacities.

Soon after moving to Omaha he joined the First Baptist church, then located at Fifteenth and Davenport streets. For five years he was president of the Nebraska Baptist Young People's union, and after retiring from that office his advice was constantly sought on all phases of young people's work in the Baptist church. Ten years ago he transferred his membership to the Calvary Baptist church, where he left two lasting testimonials in the form of a Sunday morning Bible class and the first boys' club organized in that church.

Mr. Morgan held a warm place in the hearts of the members of Calvary Baptist church. He was really loved by those who knew him well. In his relations with his fellowmen, Mr. Morgan recognized no distinctions of race, creed or class.

Mr. Morgan was unmarried. Since early November his mother, father and brother have been at his bedside. His only sister died in 1902.

Mr. Morgan was afflicted with throat trouble for a long time. Last September he went to Chicago and underwent an operation for cancer, but that did not afford relief. While all hoped his life might be spared the malignancy had gained such a hold that his physicians said it would be but a matter of time before the end would come. Mr. Morgan's strong vitality but prolonged the end. He was thoroughly resigned weeks ago and realized the nature of his case. He had been unable to talk since September. He would communicate his thoughts to callers by writing on a pad. His eyesight during the last week was partially gone. Gradually his life went out.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 Tuesday morning at the Calvary Baptist church, Twenty-fifth and Hamilton streets, when Rev. E. R. Curry, pastor of the church, will have charge of the ceremonies. The body will be taken for interment to Woodbine, Ia., the old home of Mr. Morgan.

TRAGEDY IN LIFE OF DERELICT Homeless Wanderer Once Dug a Furtive Out of Soil of Frozen Alaska.

Three years ago, hale and hearty in mind and body and worth a comfortable fortune in gold nuggets, today a penniless wanderer dependent on charity, wrecked in health and without ambition, is the story of Ole Olson, tramp, who applied at the city jail last night for a place to sleep, and was thankful for the offering of a hard stone floor because it was free.

Ole Olson and his brother, Per, older than he, started out for the far northwest of the American continent to look for the yellow metal.

Success was not fast in coming to the two adventurers, but their spirits were not daunted. They kept on working and gradually went farther and farther inland. When they had enough gold to satisfy them they began to think of going back home. With about $25,000 in nuggets between them Per and Ole Olson set out to hit the trail back to Nome, Alaska. They were robbed en route to Nome, the brother was killed and Ole wounded. Half dead, Olson was taken to Nome and from there to Seattle, where he lay in a hospital for a year, and, although a bullet had passed through his head, his life was saved. His eyesight, however, was forever impaired, one eye being totally blind and the other very much injured.

His long illness, the exposure and the results of the other wounds, left Olson's health in a very low state. The former strength of which he had been so proud, was gone, and he found himself with little ambition to attempt to learn some trade by the aid of which he might earn a livelihood with his remaining senses. So he followed the line of least resistance and has become an ordinary "parahandler." He is a stranger to the Omaha police and says he doesn't intend to stay here longer than over night. The difference between what he is and what he might have been stood out strongly when he thankfully stretched his length on the hard floor of a cell and went peacefully to sleep.

TRIAL OF THE MODISSETTS Case of Other Cattlemen Is to Come Up Day After New Year.

The trial of the land cases will begin in the United States district court Wednesday with the cases against A. M. and A. R. Modisset on the charge of conspiracy to defraud the United States out of title to large tracts of land in Sheridan county and also for conspiracy to suborn perjury in securing fraudulent entries on soldiers, Indians and others.

About thirty witnesses are under summons to testify at the trial and the case probably will last a week or ten days. W. F. Gurley is the principal attorney for the defendants. The government interests will be looked after by District Attorney Goss and Special District Attorney Rush. Some interesting features are booked from the fact that a number of Indians were procured to make filings and their testimony will have to be given through an interpreter.

The general character of the case is in many respects similar to the Richards and Comstock cases and pertains largely to filings made following the enactment of the Kinkaid law.

TRIAL FOR IODINE PAINTER Chiroprapist Whose Treatment Was Nearly Fatal Placed Under $500 Bond.

After a preliminary hearing in police court Monday morning, Julius Lund, a chiroprapist, with offices in the Karbach block, was bound over for trial in the district court under bond of $500 on the charge of practicing medicine without a license. It is alleged that on December 12 Lund was called in by Mrs. D. Folsom to administer treatment for an affection of the skin and that he painted the entire body of the woman with a strong solution of iodine. Police Surgeon Harris attended the woman, and it was only after several days of constant attention that her life was saved. She was at St. Joseph's hospital for two weeks and the case against Lund was continued until Mrs. Folsom was able to appear against him.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Real Estate Transfers for the Year Over Half a Million.

MOSTLY IN TRACTS HAVING TRACKAGE

Two Hundred and Twenty-One Building Permits Issued During the Year, Some of Them for Large Structures.

The approximate movement of real estate in South Omaha during the last year is about $500,000. This statement has been computed from the statements of most of the real estate dealers of the city.

These figures are about 20 per cent in advance during the month of May and June during which time the great bulk of the business was transacted. The work on the interurban lines has created quite a demand for property in easy reach along their routes. Sales, however, have not been brisk for the reason that property owners have refused to sell. They are looking for much better figures pending the opening of the coming season. Speculative purchases have been less numerous than in previous years. It appears to have been a year of residence building. Two hundred and eighty building permits were issued by the building inspector and the aggregate value of buildings for the year is near $600,000. The heaviest expenditures for buildings have been the packers—notable, the Omaha Packing company and Swift and Company. Armour & Co. has added one building in place of the department destroyed by fire. The Jetter Brewing company has the excavation done for a new building. The Nebraska Telephone company has practically finished its new exchange and expects to occupy it on the first day of the New Year. The same is true of the South Omaha Hospital association building. The Gate City Malt company has the rough work on its elevator completed and work is in progress on the plant. Besides these there are five or six buildings for office or business purposes.

The banking business shows an increase for the year, and the same is true of the merchants, as a rule. There have been no exceptional failures. The postoffice has shown a steady increase in business during each month of the year. The sales of postage for the year will be slightly under the $100,000 mark.

Improvements at Armour's. What the mechanics of the electrical and carpenter shops of Armour & Co.'s plant may say their "boss" has lately been brought about by the management. At all events it has added much to the comfort of these men. The fact is that the floors occupied by these mechanics have been raised eighteen inches. The reason for this lay in the fact that every storm flooded the floors as they were originally. Storm water from Q street was admitted underneath and often covered the floors several inches and left behind islands of mud. The management of late learned of the condition and ordered the remedy.

Employment Agent Victims. Several victims of the machinations of the professional employment agencies landed in South Omaha last night in a stranded condition. Most of them had exchanged their hard earned cash for worthless recommendations to the timekeepers of various packing houses. They were mostly young fellows, ignorant of city ways. Several who had no money were given places to sleep in the city jail, and some provided lodging of their own. There is little doubt but that they can secure work with the packers, who have been short of help most of the year, but the recommendations of the employment agent represent just so much money wasted.

Paving Decision Expected. A decision from the court on the Missouri avenue paving muddle is expected today. Judge Troup is said to have informed Assistant City Attorney J. D. Ringer to that effect Saturday afternoon. The decision will be handed down at 1:30 p. m. The city officials express some anxiety in the matter. There are not many who express great hope of winning this case. The attempt to pave this unlovely street was shown to have been in about as bad a muddle as the present deplorable condition, messy and unsightly condition of the street itself.

Hospital Reception New Year's. The New Year's reception at the new hospital is now assured and the arrangements have been perfected. All that remains in the matter of preparation is minor details, which will be finished today. The women of the association have been putting in extra efforts during the last week and the committees have their work in hand to receive the large number of patients who are expected. The reception will be from 2 to 3 p. m. The reception is to be purely informal and the most all descriptions will be welcomed by the association, which has been pretty strenuously taxed in the erection of so fine a building.

Magic City Gossip. Bridal Rose Silver, Godfrey's. Mrs. Ralph Hill of Chicago is visiting friends in the city. Miss Ruth Winegard is entertaining a sister from Aurora. Mrs. William Green has gone to Perisla during the holidays. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Millner, who have

MUNGER OVERRULES MOTION Federal Court Decides Not to Set Aside Restraining Order in Woodard Case.

The motion to set aside the restraining order in the case of the J. E. Woodard Coal company against the Harrington railroad was argued before Judge Munger Monday morning. Charles J. Greene and J. E. Keby appeared for the railroad company and E. E. Thomas for the Woodard Coal company.

Judge Munger deferred his decision upon the motion to vacate the restraining order prayed for by the defendants until Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when he overruled the motion.

FIGHTER THROUGH WINDOW Rose's Art Store Victim of Affray Between Three Unidentified Men.

Three men whose names the police were unable to ascertain became involved in a quarrel in the Merchants restaurant on Dodge street. They went outside to settle it and during the fight which followed one of the three was knocked through the large plate glass window in Rose's art store, next door to the restaurant. He was considerably cut by glass, but both he and his companions managed to escape before the arrival of the police.
