Matthew White, dramatic editor of Munsey's and author of the sketch, "Stop, Look and Listen," says he was prompted to select that singular title for his skit by

"At a literary club of Philadelphia one night a young poet said that Coman Doyle was paid $1 a word. "That is nothing, said a railgoad advertising man. I know a case where a man was paid $1,000 a word. Our line used to have at its grade crossing a complicated sign that began, "Beware of the engines and cars," and added injunctions and warnings that would take five minutes

"In several accident cases the com-plainants for damages declared that our plainants for damages declared that our long signs were not clear warning. Therefore the officials decided at last to get a new grade-crossing sign, and Judge Paxon was engaged to write one.

"The sign that Judge Paxon wrote cost $1,000 a word, but it is now just as much a classic as the "Father, I cannot tell a list" of Washington or "England expects.

lie" of Washington, or "England expects every man to do his duty."

"The sign that cost $1.000 a word, or $6,000 in all, was the famous "Railroad Crossing—Stop, Look and Listen."
