This is the time of year when socially things should be humming. Fun and gaiety should be at its height. The days and one should be reveiling in it, as there is an inexhaustible supply of it and of new fresh amusement, too, that resembles none of the old variety, if only the fun-loving element would get out of this state of lethargy they have been assuming since was given on Tuesday evening of last week entertaining this week, but it has been one set, consequently no one has had a particularly gay time. Society has always been accused of entertaining spasmodically, but duliness at this time of the year is unheard of and makes one feel that the Lenten season has really begun in advance. Still society hardly seems ready for pen tence and seclusion with several attractive visitors here, any one of whom seem far indifferent to a good time. So perhaps this is only a transition and may be the preparation for brilliant events to come.

NEW GAME FOR CARD CRANKS Aid in the Slaughter

Following are the rules;

If a card is played from the table at any time the card under it must be turned face up immediately, so that there shall still be eleven cards face up in front of each player.

still be eleven cards face up in front of each player.

The second player having played to the card led, the original leader must play again to the same trick, and must follow suit if he can. His opponent must then play the fourth card to the trick, following suit if able to do so.

Any card which is turned up, when it is uncovered by playing away the card on the top of it, immediately becomes available for play; but no card can be turned up until the card which was originally placed on the top of it has been legitimately played away. That is, the player is not allowed to alter the original distribution of the twenty-two cards on the table.

A trick is not complete until it contains four cards, but the player is not obliged to win unless he wishes to, neither is he obliged to play the best card he holds as one of the first two if he prefers to hold it until the next two.

it until the next two.

For example: Suppose that at no trumps B has only one club on the table, the eight, and that A. who holds the king and others, leads a small club. B puts on the eighth and A then plays his king, thinking B will have to discard; instead of which B produces the ace of clubs from his concealed hand and takes the trick.

The winner of the trick of four cards.

his concealed hand and takes the trick. The winner of the trick of four cards takes it in and turns it down and then leads for the next trick, and the play continues in this manner until all the cards have been turned up and played away, both from the table and from the concealed hands, so that there are thirteen tricks to be played for in each deal.

If the player cannot follow suit he may either discard or trump, but if he has in his concealed hand one of the suit led and falls to follow suit it is a revoke, the penalty of which is the loss of three tricks. There is no penalty for a revoke with the cards on the table, because the opponent is equally to blame for allowing it to pass.

Tricks and honors are scored as in the ordinary game, and the winner of the rubber adds fifty points to his total as a bonus.

This game is infinitely superior to double dummy, because it has the element of the unknown hands. Double dummy bridge is nothing but whist with a varying value to the tricks.

IOWAN DOES DARING DEED Stockman from Tabor, at Peril of His Life, Stops Runnway Team.

A runnway horse, attached to a light express wagon, was stopped about 3:30 gat brday afternoon near the corner of Twelfth and Dougias streets by Tom Duncan, a stockman of Tabor, Is. The horse was running swiftly eastward on Douglas street with the lines dragging on the ground, Pedestrians wildly waved their arms only to spur the frightened horse to greater speed. Dancan ran from the sidewalk and crawled into the rear end of the wagon and then to the seat, but was unable to reach the lines, so he stepped on the shafts and jumped on the horse's back. As soon as Duncan reached the lines he quickly threw the horse to the ground, narrowly escaping serious injury to himself, as he nearly fell under the animal. The horse is owned John Gilbaugh, an expressman, and ran away at Sixteenth and Chicago streets, where a heavy wagon coilided with the horse, throwing Gilbaugh from his seat, but without injury.

Not since the woman suffrage amendment Clifford R. Feenan and Edbert Feenan child labor and compulsory education bills, now pending in the legislature. It is seldom, too, that they have had such cooperation as is being given them by the men; in fact, it has been the hearty support of such organizations as the Bar asspciation, Social Service club, the labor organizations and the State Teachers' association that has encouraged the women to redouble their efforts. The attendance at the hearing of the child labor bill before the judiciary committee of the house last Thursday afternoon was proof that the women have been busy and that their efforts have been well directed. The referring of the bill back to the house with the unanimous recommendation that it be passed afforded general satisfaction, but it is realized that there must be no relaxation of effort, for the provisions of the bill are not fully understood or its necessity appreciated in the rural communities of the state, and from these sections, as well as the interests affected by the elimination plained, as follows: "Madonna della of child labor opposition may be expected. light the new rules invented for "Bridge It will behoove the club women to familiarize themselves with the provisions sible to manage such rules and still have of both the child labor and compulsory eda game anything like bridge, but this diffi- ucation bills that they may be able to of St. Katherine," Miss Stella Hamilton;

In Fourth District.

Club work in the Fourth district, under the vice presidency of Mrs. C. M. Peterson of Aurora, is very active this year. A new club has recently been organized at Bradshaw and there is good prospect of a country club being formed in York county very soon. The Fourth district has susstained a serious loss in the death of Mrs. I. N. Jones of Aurora, which occurred January 14. Mrs. Jones was one of the most prominent club women in Hamilton county

Y. W. C. A. Campaign. The Young Women's Christian asociation has announced another campaign for raising the remaining $15,000 necessary to commence work on its $100,000 building on the lot owned by the association at Seventeenth and St. Mary's avenue. February 9 to 15 are the dates-just one week. The women have organized in five teams of three members each, each team to raise $1,000. Every woman in Omaha, regardless of denomination, owes it to this work being done for young women-working women-to lend her support financially and through her personal influence with those who are able to give, bearing in mind that this is the only institution in the city that is helping young women to help themselves.

The comparative interest of men and women in some matters of vital importance to the state was illustrated at the meeting of organized agriculture held at the state farm at Lincoln last week. At the meeting of the Forestry and Park association, an organization of men, the men were outnumbered almost two to one by women. Mrs. G. W. Whitmore of Valley administered a clever rebuke. She was one of the speakers on the program and after looking over her audience remarked: "It had been my intention to ask you men to interest your wives in this subject of forestry, but think since coming before you I will change my suggestion and ask you women to try and interest your husbands."

FRUIT RAISERS JOIN HANDS Growers of Douglas County Organize

to Increase Profits of Their

Douglas county fruit growers propose to ret all that's coming to them from their industrious toil and cut out the "middle an" or whoever that is that has been chawing into the vitals of the profits in the fruit raising business. To this end about thirty fruit growers of the county resterday met at Florence and took steps effect a permanent organization which probably will be known as the Douglas bunty Fruit Growers association. D. Deyo was chairman of the meeting and probably will be elected president o the organization when it is completed. At 'esterday's meeting a committee was apcointed to draft a form of organization by-laws and constitution and call another neeting for final organization at its discretion. That committee consists of these: D. Deyo, chairman; A. F. Seybolt, William Barber, Edward Walker, County Commissloner E. G. Solomon, Otto Garsch, N. H. Nelson was one of the prominent factors in the meeting.

The fruit growers of this county, like the ruit growers of Council Bluffs once 41d, have decided their business is not turning back to them the revenue it should, largely because some middle man is getting the profits and because too, they are unable to secure as prompt service in getting their fruit to market as they should. These are some of the disadvantages they hope to remove by the organization. It is their plan to work upon the co-operative system to the extent of marketing their products. This may be accomplished by appointing one or more of their number to act as sell ing agent, letting him deal directly with the obber or the purchaser, whoever he may be, so as to cut out the commission of middle men and secure the best market, delivery and prices possible. Exactly this plan has been pursued with great profit by the raisin growers of the San Joaquin valley, California,
