REFIREE DEFERS RULING ON MATTER

Hearing Adjourns for Three Weeks to Enable Judge McPherson to Pass on Questions Submitted to Him.

At the continued hearing yesterday afternoon in the bankruptcy of the Union Pransfer company before Referee Mayne, A. Southard, president and manager the bankrupt firm, was again placed on the stand for further examination. The examination elicited the fact that Mrs. O. McKesson held half of the stock of the Inion Transfer company as collateral for an indebtedness of $17,600 owing by Southard to her.

Owing to the unsatisfactory results of the inquiry, so far as the condition of the bankrupt company was concerned, several of the creditors yesterday suggested that an expert accountant be employed to examine the books and accounts of the company. No action was taken, but Referee Mayne intimated that if he considered this necessary he would appoint an expert accountant for this work.

The further hearing was continued for three weeks, and in the meantime Judge Smith McPherson is expected to rule on the matters which were presented to him Friday in this case,

Several Hours. Ivan Iverson, a section hand in the em ploy of the Milwaukee railroad, was struck by eastbound passenger train No. 4 yesterday morning and received injuries which resulted in his death several hours later at the General hospital.

The accident occurred in the local yards close to the Children's Sons' factory on South avenue, where Iverson was at work cleaning out the ice and snow from a frog in the switch. Iverson had his head and ears muffled up as a protection against the piercing cold and did not hear the approach of the train. He was struck by the locomotive with such force as to throw him into the air higher than the smoke stack of the engine and about forty feet from the track.

When picked up Iverson was sclous and blood was pouring from several deep gashes in his head. His left leg was found to be badly fractured. He was conveyed in an ambulance to the General hospital, where, in addition to the injuries above mentioned, examination showed that he had been severely hurt internally and that his chances for surviving were slight The unfortunate man was struck at 8:30 o'clock and lingered until 4:20 in the after-Marters in District Court The district court jury in the damage suit of H. F. Keiler and wife against the Board of Park commissioners and the City of Council Bluffs returned a sealed verdict shortly after midnight Friday which when opened by Judge Thornell yesterday was found to be in favor of the defendants. In his instructions to the jury Judge Thornell held that in the event a verdict should be returned for the plaintiffs it should be against the park board alone and not against the city. Mr. and Mrs. Keller sued for $5,000 damages, alleging that the park board in erecting a house in Fairnount adjoining their property had diverted the natural waterway so as to cause the surface water from the hill to flow onto their premises and flood their cellar, badly damaging the foundations and walls.

FINE FOR DODGING SUBPOENA lowa Man Who Fears to Testify is Punished for Contempt.

CRESTON, Ia., Feb. 2 .- (Special.)-Frank McGrath, an important witness igainst Marion Roach, who is to be tried for perjury, was assessed the costs of the district court for one day for contempt of court by Judge Towner, amounting to about $100. Through fear of the negro McGrath has been dodging the process servers. When the case was called and it was found the subpoens had not been served Judge Towner ordered the case carried over to Tuesday and the costs assessed against McGrath.

The charge of perjury against Roach his wife. The assault occurred in the Burlington depot and McGrath attempted to protect the woman. Roach, it is alleged, pulled a gun and struck McGrath over the head with it. In justice court Roach swore it was not a gun, but a large key he used. A number of witnesses will testify in the perjury trial, it is said, that they saw the gun. If the perjury charge is proved Roach stands a good chance of a sentence for a term of years at Fort Madison.

Woman Dies at Party. HARLAN, Ia., Feb. 2.-(Special.)-Mrs. Anna Weeks died suddenly at a "sailing party" given by Mrs. L. T. Potter and Mrs. A. J. Gibson at the home of Mrs. Potter, at 3:30 p. m. today of apoplexy. There were about 100 women present and all were in the midst of a very jolly time. After listening to music, as they were supposed to be leaving port, the nostesses announced that Mrs. Weeks would read a selection, "The Crime of Pinafore." Mrs. Weeks responded in her usual happy manner and seemed in her usual health and spirits. She read in a clear voice which carried to the remotest corners of the rooms. After reading about ten minutes she swayed forward and fell to the floor without warning. Everything possible was done. Physicians were hastily summoned, but life was found to be extinct. She was removed to her home at Judge N. W. Macy's.

Some Bill as a Party Measure.

SOME ARE DVISING AGAINST COURSE

Would Force Republicans to Make the Committee Bill a Party Measure and Leave Democrats Without Influence.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 2.- (Special Telegram.)-At a joint caucus of the ouse and senate democrats this afteroon it was decided to leave to a sub committee, consisting of Senators Moon and Lambert and Representatives Damar, Schulte and Miller of Bremer, the task of going over the two primary election bills now before the legislature, with instructions to report at a caucus to be called next week. An effort was made to get the caucus to unite on a primary measure, but there was opposition to this. If the democrats caucus on the measure and adopt a party bill it almost surely will be followed by the republicans doing the same. The measure would then be passed the delicate touch that marks the master by the republicans under party whip, with the democrats having no voice in the measure whatever. Unless party influence is brought to bear it is believed the vote of both houses on the primary would not divide on party lines, as both parties are divided on the measure. Miller of Bremer is understood to favor a party meas ure, while Stirton, Lambert, Whiting, Demar and others are not ready to do so

More Private Appropriations. At the last session of the general as sembly the policy was determined upon to discontinue appropriations for the benefit of private institutions. For some years the state has been giving a considerable amount each year to assist private institutions that are of a charitable nature, such as the Benedict home in this city and some Catholic institutions in Sloux City and other places. Last session a bill was passed appropriating money for these to extend over a period of five years, the amount to be less each year, with the understanding that after five years it would be discontinued. Notwithstanding this, several appropriation bills are already introduced for the benefit of these institu-

Jay Williams Tom Dare Lucius Henderson Mr. Sampaon Mr. Sampson . Myron Delano Dobson Jorkins Clinton Maynard Gregory Rodgers Elwood Duncan Frank Woodson "The Strength of the Weak" and Miss Florence Roberts form a combination worthy of praise. The play itself lacks hand, but is of value as exhibiting a woman's approach to the ever present question, to which but one answer has been returned as yet. A fine disregard for logic is displayed in the main handling of the theme. The action is forced along the lines laid down by the authors until the condition that has defied all writers, as it has all mankind, even womanly intuition falls, and resort is had to the expedient of death. One had been led to almost hope, as the story is developed, that either Miss Smith or Miss Thompson had evolved some plan by which the sin might be ex-

> Triumph for Miss Roberts. Miss Roberts is a woman of five attainments. Well ripened by experience, and yet sufficiently young to present girlish charms without their obvious assumption, she attacks the proposition with force and accuracy. Her effort is carefully sustained at all times, and becomes impressive as it progresses. It is the cumulative effect that she has in mind, for she slowly but surely builds up the part to the supreme moment and then she is superb. It is a rare exhibition of the power of repression she af fords in her last appearance, even more affective than the climax of expression she attains in the scenes of the third act, of which there are three very strong ones. The character is remarkably well rounded out by her, and is evenly strong and forceful, and as thoroughly logical as the situstion will permit. Altogether, it deserves the great praise it has received in unbroken chorus throughout the land. Mr. Kent and Mr. Bergen, as the father and son, afford fine assistance to Miss Roberts, sustaining themselves well. Mr. impasse is reached.
