

RETAILERS AFTER JOBBERS

Threaten to Establish Large Co-operative Wholesale Grocery House.

PENALTY FOR JOBBERS RETAILING GOODS

Secretary Fischer Says It is Surprising How Roosevelt Doctrine Has Been Espoused Among Wholesalers' Employees.

The Omaha Retail Grocers' association has threatened to organize and operate a co-operative wholesale grocery company unless the local jobbers discontinue the practice of selling goods direct to consumers.

Acting on the "hunch," the jobbers are becoming very careful about selling to others than retailers, and some have gone so far as to refuse to sell goods to their own employees, who heretofore have been privileged to buy groceries for themselves at the same prices paid by the retailers.

"Too Much Rooseveltism." "Why should you object to the wholesale house selling groceries to its employees?"

"It is surprising how large families the employees have," he said. "To judge by the amount of groceries they buy from the jobbers, there is not one of them but could fulfill President Roosevelt's highest ideal as a perpetrator of the race."

Mr. Fisher told of one case where the manager of a business house which employs a large number of men had the nerve to make a list of his employees, take it to a grocery house and ask the grocer to sell groceries at jobbing prices to all named in the list.
