REMINDER OF OLD CLAIM CLUB

Sons of Men Who Were Run Out Come to Springfield to Look After the Land.

SPRINGFIELD, Neb., Feb. 15.—(Special.)—As a reminder of how the land grabbers worked their schemes in Sargy county in the 1870s, long before the Klondike land was ever thought of, three brothers by the name of Newland came here from their homes in Iowa for the purpose of looking up the title to 120 acres of land known as the Clarke land in Plattfield precinct and now owned by William Satterfield.

came here to claim, if possible, their inheritance. The members of the "claim club" have long since gone to their happy hunting grounds, and the fact that there ever was such an organization has for years been considered by the people here no more than a tradition.

Some years after these events one John Lewis entered this same piece of land, which he had bought from one of the Newland brothers. He was not long in discovering that the title was in the hands of the three brothers, and he was anxious to get it back.

He was warned to keep out, but being from Missouri, he entered the land, built a house, moved his family upon the claim and began clearing it off and making other improvements.

According to their story, and the truth of it is pretty well established by some of the old settlers of those parts, their father, James Newland, came here in the spring of 1864 in search of land which he could enter, be ascertained from the records that this particular piece was government land and subject to entry, but was being held and covered up by an energetic "claim club" then holding full sway in the southwestern part of Sargy county.
