A Most Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts from native nedicinal roots and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also ossesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiforment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherry-bark, Bloodroot, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities. In all cases where there is a wasting away of fiesh, loss of appeulte, with weak stomoch, as in the early stages of constometh, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine lacts as a valuable nutritive and

Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago, says of glycerine:

"In dyspepsia it serves an excellent purpose. Bolding a fixed quantity of the peroxide of hydrogen in solution, it is one of the best manufactured products of the present time in its action upon enfeebled, disordered stomacha especially if there is ulceration or caurital gastricts teatarnial inflammation of stomach. It is a most efficient preparation. Gircerine will relieve many cases of pyrosis thearthurn and excessive gastric isomach acidity."

Your charming letter has been the subject of many interesting conferences. John, like the dear he is, insisted that you must come direct from your aunt's-and realize to the fullest extent the conveniences of our little home, from cooking range to gas grate, Welsbach lights and all-but, alas, "Fate steals along with silent tread," and I'm simply torn with emotions. Just as we get comfortably settled in our little home along stalks Fate and in the guise of "business" decrees that John shall hie him to the coast at once on a matter of much importance, where his stay will be indefinite-several weeks, at least, Of course, I shall accompany him. Nellie, dear, it is needless to say I have had a good long cry over the disappointment of not seeing you before we leave-but we shall simply lock up our home and on our return, mark you well, young miss, you must be the very first "guest of bonor." Tears will come when I think we must surrender our dear little home for a small, stuffy hotel room. Just think, we must give up, possibly for months, our pretty gas grate, before which we have spent so many pleasant evenings; our beautiful den, of which we were so proud, with its little gas heater and cute colored lights; our gas range, with all its conveniences, and even my waffle irons, to say nothing of the beautiful Welsbach inverted lights which have just been pat in. Oh, it's simply awful. We are so busy getting ready-for we start at once that I cannot write more now, but, girlie, I'll write just the first chance I get and tell you where to address me.
