BENNETT'S

You Know the Phrase

"It's an ill wind that blows nobody any good" (or words to that effect). The little grocer, forced to quit giving Green Trading Stamps, is unwillingly sending his customers to Bennett's Big Grocery.

While he handled the little green sticker, he was increasing his business proportionately as we are increasing ours, but he had to capitulate at the word of certain "interested parties," who went to the jobbers and threatened to shut off the little grocer's source of supply.

To prevent customers flocking in droves to Bennett's—where they know they can get Green Trading Stamps with all purchases in all departments all the time—the little grocer (some, not all) is telling his customers that Green Trading Stamps are going out of town. Such magnificent cheek!

We believe in the policy of "live and let live." The little grocer should quit telling lies, he should play fair. Lie-telling is no way to retain public confidence and patronage.

The people are not fools—they'll have what they want, and they'll have it when they want it. They want Green Trading Stamps and they get them here every time and all the time.
