CRIMINALS' LATEST DODGE Trick of Changing Their Faces Accomplished by Aid of a Doctor. Expert criminologists who have made the stigmata of degeneration their life study, who can tell to a nicety what possibilities from crime lie behind the mask on which nature's cunning hand has limned the story of dark thoughts and base desires, will be presently discounted by the most amazing obliteration of all vicious signs and symbols that ever translated vice into the outward semblance of respectability.

changes his face. He does not resort to manifold disguises to evade the police. He goes to a specialist and has his features made over, and, secure against detection, he walks about the streets, his opportunities for evil doing multiplied a thousandfold. So steadily and quietly has this work been carried on, so quickly has the "tip" been passed, that it would astound the authorities to learn to what extent the famous rogues' gallery has been cleverly tampered with. Some of its celebrities have completely faded out of existence. Others remain only in that pulsing half-likeness which is often made deceiving than the change entire. The manufacturer of new criminals out of the old has, in fact, become one of the necessary tricks of the trade, and here in New York, in a well known establishment in the very heart of the city, where fashionable women go to be beautified, and where malformations or defects are removed by the skillful hand of science, many a local reputation for house breaking and picking pockets has been wiped out in half an hour's sojourn with the lancet and a syringe. The doctor sees in the patient only his "case," and asks no questions. The delicate nature of the operation insures the strictest privacy. The thief or the badger game notable has only to assume well fitting garments and exhibit a sufficiency of bank notes to be "treated." In luxurious quarters, with only the white-capped nurse who assists the surgeons to note the disappearance of one facial trait and the birth of another, the man or woman whose photograph down in Mulberry street is damning evidence of guilt, is literally given another chance. Curiously enough, it is the petty criminal who has so far been most alive to the gain to be hoped for in this exchange of physical characteristics. Those who work in crowds or through force of methods are for one reason or another much in the public eye--viz., that of the police--have proved the most anxious to "lose their looks." The man who blows up a safe or holds up a train has less need, or thinks he has. Some of them are well aware that the surgeon who rearranges their features is the combsman of their calling, though the subject is never mentioned between them. He has been able to follow the careers of a few, and has learned interesting details in the lives of his clients. One thief, who had "done time" at various intervals since his boyhood, in his moments of liberty was a "sport" of dashing appearance who frequented the race tracks. In a period of affluence he decided to retire. His first investment in a new life was $10 for the face of virtue, armed with which he went out to seek his fortune in other fields. Another, like the lesser hero in "A Social Highwayman," has become a gentleman's man. And these serve to bolster up the doctor's theory of nature's rearranging for this interference with its rights. --New York World.

making it easier for him. The conventional husband was making the conventional spring bonnet remarks. "After I have worried all winter over the money I was trying so hard to save," he said, "I find that you have spent it all for your new hat." "Yes," replied his sweet young wife. "I want to relieve you of as many of your worries as possible."--Judge.
