INOUIRY OF POISON CASES when seeds will be a improvement league.

Rigid Investigation Will be Made at Leavenworth, says Captain Palmer.

FIRST AFFAIR OF KIND ON RECORD

Some Mystery Involved and Army Officials Will Probe to Get at the Exact Facts.

"The, deplorable affair at the Nationa Soldiers' home at Leavenworth, where so many of the old veterans were poisoned by cating corned beef hash, will result in a most searching investigation," said Captain H. E. Palmer, member of the board of directors of the National Homes for Disabled Volunteers. "Colonel Elwell, inspector general of the homes, is, or soon will be, at Leavenworth to investigate the matter. He is an experienced surgeon and medical practitioner and will make a most exhaustive investigation of the matter. It is one of those unexpected and unfortunate affairs over which there is seemingly no human control. It is the first case of the kind that has ever happened at the homes, where many thousands of cases of canned meats are used annually. Canned meats are not used in any of the hospitals at the homes. only the best and freshest meats, fruits and vegetables being bought for the hospital departments. Of course it is also the alm of the board to buy only the highest inspected grades of canned meats for the homes in general. The supplies are bought at frequent intervals so as to have them as fresh as possible, and none are purchased in such quantities as to suffer from possible deterioration by being kept in stock."
