Having heard that Hackberry is rich in coon and other fur bearing animals the first squad of the first platoon of the home guards went forth to investigate. Colonel West, recently of Shelby had command of the squad, which consisted of Jule Ludden, Jimmy Farris and the two Foxes, Frank and Burrell. They marched in column of fours, route step, until they arrived in the coon country, when the practiced eyes of Colonel West soon discovered a flock of coon tracks leading to the base of a large tree at the top of which was a hole where the coons played hide-and-seak with the hunters. A council of war decided that Colonel West should ascend the tree and smoke the coons out, but owing to atmospheric conditions which prevail at regular intervals in Hackberry it was found that smoke wouldn't travel downward. At this juncture Celenel West conceived a stratagem the like of which was scarcely equalled by the crafty Ulysses in his device of a wooden horse by the use of which the Greeks captured Troy, nor by any other wooden device which the wooder heads have evolved all down through the ages. He took off his hunting blouse, which is a three-quarter cross between a gunny sack and a yellow journal, and tied the neck of it shut and stretched it across 10 the hole, and then by blowing a few whiffs of cigar smoke in below he bagged the whole bevy of coons. Imagine the consternation that prevailed the next moment when the sack was opened and found to

The car in which the dynamite was located was demolished, three other freight cars were wrecked and considerable damage was done to the freight depot. The dynamite is reported to have been shipped from the Dupont Powder company to its branch in Atlanta and was declared to have been shipped as "percussion caps." The cause of the explosion has not been fixed. It is said to have followed the open. ing of the car.
