INTERESTING REVIEW OF THE TOPIC

Usual Grist of Stories Offered by the Publishers, Some of More Than the Usual Amount of Merit.

"The Secret of Toni," by Molly Elliott Seawell, is a romance of everyday life in France. The hero is introduced as a boy of 18 who runs away with a circus. The story follows his picturesque career to manhood and culminates in a happy marriage. D. Appleton & Co. is the publisher.

"The Turn of the Balance," by Brand Whitlock, is a plea for friendlier treatment of the criminal, who, as Mr. Whitlock points out, is a human being, after all. Mr. Whitlock aims to write about real people and as mayor of Toledo the author of this unusual story has had opportunity to put his theories in practice. To give an example of the sort of thing that he is doing, here is one reform of the many he has carried through, and of which he is particularly proud: In the workhouse he has abolished the striped raiment. He has introduced a parole system and a parole officer has been appointed. It is the officer's business to look up situations where he who has been an inmate of the workhouse will still be given work. The inmate whose conduct is satisfactory is given a letter to the would-be employer. He is sent forth with the letter alone. No guard goes with him. None has ever run away; their honor was enough to hold them. And this is only one of the many things of similar nature that he has done. Published by the Bobbs-Merrill company.

"The Malfactor," by E. Phillips Oppenheim, author of "A Maker of History," "The Master Mummer," "Mysterious Mr. Sabin," etc., is an absorbing story which will fair to be the greatest success of Wingrave Seton, re-entering the world after an imprisonment chivalrously faced rather than defend himself at a woman's expense, is involved in some strange events and has a remarkable influence upon the people with whom he is brought in contact. Deceived, brooding on his wrongs, young, wealthy and free, he begins a new life, and the reader wonders what will happen. Illustrated by F. H. Townsend. Published by Little, Brown & Co.

"Federal Power Over Carriers and Corporations," by E. Parmelee Prentice, is an exhaustive study of the Sherman anti-trust act and of the federal powers upon which the act is based, with references not only to judicial decisions, but to the constitutional history of which the decisions are but part. State and federal statutes have been carefully and fully examined, beginning before the adoption of the constitution and coming down to the present time, while the annals and debates of congress, books of travel, contemporaneous newspapers and other original sources have also been searched; and in this way the meaning of the constitutional provisions has been ascertained, the practice of the state and federal governments has been determined, and the field for the operation of the anti-trust act has been defined, with a precision and authority not otherwise obtainable. The references to judicial decisions constraining and applying the Sherman act are complete; the rule of the cases has been followed so as to show the present position of the courts upon the important questions arising under the act, and citations are also given to the debates of congress, the course of the statutes and to leading articles in the magazines. Published by the Macmillan company.

Among the books received from the press of Richard G. Badger & Co. are numerous collections of poems including "City Songs and Country Carols," by Thomas F. Porter; "The Processional," a poem by George Gordon; "Adrienne and Other Poems," by Mary Isabel Wymore; "The Master—A Rosary of Christian Faith," by Carl Lund Bates; "The Dolorous Blade, a Brief Account of the Adventures of that Good Knight of the Round Table, Sir Rhyne, Called 'Le Sauvage,' Done Into Rhyme," by Donald Newton; "Songs from Capital," by Clara Ophelia Bland; "The Jewels of King Art," by James Connolly; "The Dream of Hell," by Wilson Duley; "Poems," by Allan Brant; "The Cry of Defeat," by Edith de Christian; "Woodland," by Russell Whitcomb; "Poems," by L. Noble; "Virginia Vaughn, a Romance in Verse," by Margaret A. Richard. Included in this collection are two books of prose: "Personal Recollections of Johannes Brahms; Some of His Letters To and Pages from a Journal Kept by George Henschel," with portraits, and "What's Next or Shall we Live Again?"; "The great question answered by 300 living Americans of prominence in politics, in the army and navy, in science, art, music and literature, in mercantile world, in the professions and in the chairs of universities." Compiled by Clara Spaulding Ellis.

"Memoirs of Prince Chlodwig of Hohenlohe-Schillingfuerst," edited by Prof. Friedrich Curtius, is one of the most important books of the last year. The interest excited by them is indeed scarcely less in England and America than in Germany. Everywhere they have been looked on as historical documents of the first importance; while they have also been greeted as a remarkable contribution to the literature of intimate revelation, taking their place with the diary of Pepys as well as with the Gretchen manuscript. The late chancellor is said to have revealed very frankly the inside history of the Kaiser's dismissal of Bismarck, and other secrets of German diplomatic and political history. It was in consequence of the publication of this work that the chancellor's son was compelled to resign his post of the German ambassador. This work to the times of which it treats, has, of course, added materially to the immediate and sensational success it has enjoyed. The Macmillan company is the publisher.

"The Rome Express," by Major Arthur Griffiths, author of "The Passenger from Calais," etc., is a story intended to please the reader who likes quick action and thrilling climaxes. A mysterious murder on a flying express train, a witty Italian, a charming woman caught in the meshes of circumstantial evidence, a chivalrous Englishman and a police force with a keen nose for the wrong clue are the ingredients from which Major Griffiths

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Park Site Injunction Goes Over Because the City is Not Ready.

BRACING OF THE Q STREET VIADUCT Present Work Only Temporary to Keep it Up Until Steel for Permanent Repairs Can Be Obtained from Mills.

The park site injunction case was put over until Wednesday of next week for the reason that the city was not ready. The special counsel had not been hired to defend the case at the hearing, which was set for yesterday afternoon. It is expected that Lambert & Winters will have charge of the case, although a current rumor also says that T. J. Mahoney of Omaha will conduct the defense. He is also the attorney for the land company who owns syndicate park, or at least the company which claims to own it, since that is now one of the points in question. This rumor has not been verified.

Repairing Q Street Viaduct. Extensive bracing is now in progress under the Q street viaduct, which has been closed for the last week on account of its dangerous condition. The old stringers had rotted and the strain of the heavy cars had cracked them in many places, so that it was counted extremely dangerous to longer use the viaduct without repairs. The work now in progress is what is called shoring up the structure. When this temporary work is completed it is thought the viaduct will be strong enough to bear the weight of ordinary traffic. As soon as the new steel for the replacing of the two dangerous spans arrives it will be put in place and it is the intention to accomplish this work if possible without interrupting travel. It is likely on this account that the railroad will not look with great favor on the repair or reconstruction of the L street viaduct. No conferences have as yet been held on this structure. It is obligatory on the Union Pacific and the Union Stock yards to keep this viaduct in repair, but whether they can be prevailed upon to build a new structure is a matter of some doubt.

Magic City Gossip. Mrs. Jacob Levy has gone to Kansas City to visit her son. Our fancy sandals for the small girls are pleasing. Cressey. C. A. Melcher is in Atlantic, Ia., paying a short visit to friends and relatives. Edward Steinwender has returned from Germany after a four months' visit. Officer D. D. Ringer is able to be out on crutches since the injury to his knee cap. N. D. Mann is ill at his home, being threatened with an attack of pneumonia. We shall have a number of extra clerks for Saturday's trade. Cressey, the Shoe Man. L. N. Shevlin of St. Joseph, Mo., has returned for a visit with his family, who are still in this city. Mrs. Laura Furber, formerly a nurse at the South Omaha hospital, is reported very seriously ill at Ashland, Neb. The South Omaha police court tried only one case yesterday morning. This is the smallest number for many weeks. See our window for the finest display of men's job shoes at $2.50 and $3. Nothing like them. Cressey, the Shoe Man. J. W. Barrett of the Bureau of Animal Industry left yesterday afternoon to enter the government service in Panama. The delegation which has been in Lincoln the past week looking after the charter amendments is expected to leave today. Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Herber of Kansas City, Mo., are the guests of W. A. McClintock, the city health commissioner. G. W. Gribble expects to take his vacation Monday. He has been in the treasurer's office as deputy almost every day of the last year. The funeral of Lawrence Warren took place yesterday morning at 9 a. m. He was only a year and three months old, the son of G. W. Warren. The meeting of the Woman's Missionary society of the Presbyterian church, which Mrs. G. W. Brewer yesterday afternoon was largely attended. Thirteen members were received Wednesday evening by the Presbyterian church. Special effort is being made to increase the membership just this month. The Young Men's Christian association lecture course will be completed with the presentation of "Hilary" by the Bouden company at the auditorium tonight. The women's auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian association has made extensive preparations for a cooking exchange at the association rooms Saturday. Extradition papers were secured for the return of Nora Burns to Battle Creek, Mich., under the charge of grand larceny. The chief of police from that city came after her. The Young Men's Christian association chess club has just been playing off a series of four-hour games, and boys have entered the contest and considerable interest is shown. The officers of the P. E. O. society will meet with Mrs. George F. French, March 30, eighth and B streets, Saturday, March 30, instead of with Mrs. Carl Smith as previously arranged. The present week is holy week in the Catholic societies and the observances continue daily until Sunday, when the Lenten season will close with a solemn high mass at all the churches. Low shoes are all the rage this season for old and young. Don't buy a pair until you have seen them. Elegant stock on showing. Dozens of styles not to be seen elsewhere in our city. Cressey, the Shoe Man.

It is reported that a number of steam fitters walked out of Swift and Company's plant yesterday on demanding and being refused a raise in wages from 17c cents to 20 cents per hour. The places were filled at once. P. A. Barrett, twenty-seventh and L streets, met with a serious accident at Murray, Neb., a few days ago. He was driving when his horse fell on him, fracturing the collar bone. The local stockmen and commission men are congratulating themselves on the outcome of the Shorthorn sale Wednesday. C. E. Clark's herd furnished the bulk of the blooded animals. The average price was $25 per head. One thousand dollars was the highest bid, and was made by Thomas Westrope & Son of Harlan, Ia.

Cure for Insomnia. While crossing City Hall park recently a well-known pharmacist was stopped by an acquaintance who said: "Oh, Doc, you're just the man I want to make me sleep nights." "Troubled with insomnia?" asked the doctor. "No; it's oats. You know I live in Platteville, and the folks there and some of the boys sing their duets on the back yard fence until they almost drive me to drink. Can't you recommend some sedative for my nerves?" The doctor drew forth a pencil and card. Rapidly scribbling some illegible words which only a drug clerk can decipher, he handed the prescription to the man. "But how often shall I take it, doctor?" said the patient. "Oh, you don't take it at all. All you have to do is to put it in the place and walk on the fence."—New York Times.

"The Immediate Care of the Injured," contains much useful information by Albert S. Morrow, A. B., M. D., attending surgeon to the Workhouse Hospital and to the New York City Home for the Aged and Infirm, and assistant attending surgeon to the Manhattan Maternity hospital. It is intended to be useful alike to physicians, nurses and laymen, and at the same time serve as a text book for the use of first aid classes. Many illustrations have been introduced with a view of affording a clear explanation of points which might otherwise be misunderstood. In addition to the immediate treatment, the subsequent treatment of some of the more important forms of injury has been briefly outlined to make the book more valuable to those who may
