Exponents of the Law, Whose Lives and Practice Leave Only Honor to the Profession.

The resolutions on the late Charles E. Morgan were read by Louis D. Holmes, who pronounced a tribute to him, upon his unimpeachable integrity and his fine Chrischaracter. John C. Wharton, who was Mr. Morgan's partner for two years, tel eloquently of the life lived by this lawyer, a life of devotion to doing good such as is rarely seen. He showed that Charles E. Morgan was an altruist of noblest type.

"I nover knew another man so thoroughly conscientious and upright as Charles E. Morgan," he said. streets, where Mrs. Birnbaum had been at the home of her uncle. Smith was off duty and dressed in plain clothes at the time the assault occurred.

The assault occurred at 5 o'clock Friday evening. Some of the details of the occurrence were reported to Captain Dunn at the police station and he immediately communicated them to Chief Donahue, receiving instructions to divest Smith of his badge of authority and keys when he should report for duty on the third detail at midnight.

John J. Gwin, 2002 Cuming street; Benfamin F. Stewart, 923 North Twenty-first street; John Sievens, $17 North Twentyfirst street, and Neis Jensen, 2102 Cuming street, are among the witnesses against Smith. Each one of these signed statements, setting forth what they saw and heard, and their testimony is corroborative of different portions of the story told by Mrs. Birnbaum berself.

After being suspended, Smith wrote a letter of explanation to Chief Donahue, in which he says: "I slapped her just a little with my hand in the face, but not hard."

Mrs. Eirnbaum was unwilling, when she called on Chief Donahue Saturday morning, to file a complaint in police court against Smith, shrinking from the publicity the incident would give her, but Donahue insisted that she push the matter, and she promised to return in the afternoon and make formal charge.

Smith was appointed to the police force about four years ago. He has been before the board of commissioners for reprimand on triffing charges on two or three
