hest cualities and prices promise to go higher.

Prices on cereals and syrups are unchanged, with the demand only fair for this season of the year. The rush period has passed for several months and little improvement is anticipated until the close of the season of warm weather.

No change is reported in corn or tomatoes for the list week. Some very indifferently packed western corn has been sold at a low price in order to clean up. Strictly first-class goods have not been offered below previous quotations.

There is not much business to report either in spots or futures. The jobbers are not particularly interested in spot goods, as the market is not very active. Neither is there very much being done in the way of futures. There is no disposition, however, on the part of the carners to shade prices. Everything that enters into the cost of these goods is higher than last year, and the labor question promises to be the most serious of all. Canners therefore that are not located where there is a good chance to get help are not at all anxious to do any business in futures.

The last one of the heavy Red Alaska camers has announced an advance to take effect April 15. While this advance may be only 5c per dozen, it looks entirely probable that further advance will be made probable that further advance will be made within a short time.

The recent heavy wind storms on the guif coast have again seriously interfered with the pack of cove oysters and cut down the amount of the pack quite materially. Inasmuch as a short pack was already anticipated, this doubtless will have the effect of advancing prices.

The dried fruit market is very quiet. While the sales are increasing daily, they have not yet attained a volume which is ordinarily expected at this season of the year. The high prices on peaches, spricots and pears have had the effect of diminishing the interest which the retailer usually takes in these goods in the springular takes in the
