Jamestown exposition might work much ; "Ilmitation enters into the vasiness of character," she declared, "and the ideals held before the child determine to a great extent what the man will be. It is be cause of the strength of his appeal to the imagination that the proposed naval and military display at Jamestown is capable of accomplishing so great harm. really wish to develop the spirit of mercy, other than that of cruelty, to exait reason more than violence, why not depict the enticing splendors of peace instead of the enticing splendors of war?

Women Talk

Miss Jane Addams, head of Hull house Chicago, received a hearty welcome. She spoke of "New Ideals of Peace" and dwelt upon the part that women may play in bringing about a Christlan unity among

Mrs. Lucia Ames Mend of Boston spoke on "The History of the Peace Movement." Miss Ellen M. Henrotin, former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Chicago, discussed "The Home and the Economic Waste of War."

Mrs. Frederick Nathan, president of the Consumers' league of New York, took for a topic "Industry and Its Relations to Peace."

Women constitute a very large percentage of the purchasing public. As the years goby (no doubt owing to the propagands of the Consumers' league) an increasingly large number of women show a desire to acquire their purchases with such peace of conscience as is assured them by the treaty which probibits night work for women. Instead of making individual efforts to discriminate in favor of goods from the taint of cruelty involved in night work, their consciences are freed, once for all, by that treaty as to all goods from all the countries bound by it. Would that similar treatives were enacted extending the exemption of the accomplished by the same enlightened methods, which make for international peace.

The industrial gains, to be accomplished by the same enlightened methods, which make for international peace.

The industries of the different nations are their mainstay, and carry wealth to their centers, and are like the arteries in our bodies, carrying blood to the heart, the coustant action of which renews our vistality. To these facts mankind is at last awakening. War is becoming too businessike for a business generation. It costs too much, Costs not only to the conquered, but to the bonqueror. In destroying his enemies he destroys at least in part, the sources of his own wealth. Hence the necessities of industry work eternally for peace.

Realising that we have thus reached a pende.

Realizing that we have thus reached a point far beyond tribal isolation and that we must in future recognize our international commercial bonds, an international tional commercial bonds, an international conference has been arranged, to be held next July in Switzerland, to be attended by delegates from the various European Consumers leagues, for the exchange of ideas and statements relating to the different standards of production and distribution in diffe ent countries. The aim is eventually to establish an international standard of the stinics of labor.

The feeling of universal brotherhood has already been aided by this international movement, aided more than perhaps most of us realize. Women can indeed be proud of the fact that largely through their efforts this Consumers league movement has been organized and fostered.

Letter from Julia Ward Howe.

Letter from Julia Ward Howe. William A. Richer, dramatic critic of the London Tribune, was the last speaker at the women's meeting. He spoke of "The Fing of Peace-a Plea for the United States

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, who was to have been one of the guests of honor, but who could not be present, sent a letter, in which she outlined her efforts toward a peace movement, an object which she had pursued for upward of thirty years. Congratulating the women of the first peace congress on the happy change in peace sentiment, Mrs. Howe declared that "women's colleges and women's influence have had everything to do with the great advance which we see in the moral efficiency of our sex."

In conclusion she said: "Let us press forward in the light of new knowledge, of new experiences. If we have rocked the cradie, if we have soothed the slumbers of mankind, let us be on hand at their great awakening to make steadfast the peace of the world."

Address by Minister Barrett.

John Barrett, formerly minister to Colombia, spoke at the meeting at the Hote and industrial aspects of the peace movement were considered. Mr. Barrett said: if all the Panamerican conferences had accomplished nothing else than the establishment of the International Bureau of the American Republics, they would have done enough to warrant their being called together. This institution, which is supported by the twenty-one independent nations of the western hemisphere, is becoming a powerful international agency, not only for the promotion of commerce and trade, but for the cementing of closer these of friendship and association.

There is nothing whatever antagonistic to the policies of European countries in the policy and plan of the international tureau. Today its monthly bulletins circulate in large numbers throughout Europe and are found in the legations and consulates of European countries in all parts of the world. European trade publications and newspapers quote from its pages, while the bureau's correspondence department is continually receiving and answering large numbers of letters of inquiry from Europe about commercial opportunities in Latin America. The bureau is not bound or expected to assist European interests, but it is too big and troad an institution to show any antagonistic attitude. There is plenty of room in Latin America for the commerce of all the world. The United States has no desire to retard the growth of European trade is its sister republics, but holds that there is abundance of opportunity for the United States and Europe alike; and, in turn, the United States government, in the hope of seeing South America reaching out for wider markets in the United States, and thereby bring about a greater prosperity for all concerned.

The United States has never fully approciated the vast importance and signal success of the visit to South America of its distinguished secretary of state, Mr. Elliu Root. It is beginning now, after nearly a year has passed, to realize that no other secretary of state in the history of the United States has accomplished so much for the promotion of international friendship as has Mr. Root in this extraordinary tour. He did more for the removal of distrust of the policies of the United States throughout South America and for the upbullding of mutual confidence and good will than the work of a hundred years of ordinary diplomatic procedure and intercourse. Had he been the president of the United States or of France, the emperor of Germany or the king of England, of Spain or of Italy; he could not have been given a more atten.

James W Vanctices and the states of the United States are states of the United States are states of the United States received from one end of South America to the other. James W. VanCleve spoke on the "Importance of Peace to Industry.

Young People's Meeting. Five thousand young people responded to the invitation to a "young peoples" meeting" at Carnegie hall this afternoon. Dr. James J. Walsh of St. John's college, dis cussed the "Struggle for Life and Peace." Prof. Henry Turner Bailey, agent of the State Board of Education for the Promotion of Industrial Drawing of Massachus setts, spoke on "The Peace Movement and the Arts." Senorita Huldobro spoke on the topic "The Christ of the Andes."

"Sooner shall these mountains crumble to dust than Argentines and Chilians break the peace which at the feet of Christ the Redeemer they have sworn to maintain!"

The inauguration of the monument of Christ the Redeemer, on the Cordillera of the Andess-a monument of international peace (the first in history) between Chili and Argentinas-has a grand significance at once political and social.

The colossal statue upon that pinnacle, 14,450 feet above the sea, surrounded by peaks of perpetual snow, dominating as it does the two countries of Argentina and Chili, whose people have been nurtured in the same cradle and whose history is one, long though they had been blinded by foolish antagonisms. Now they can look up the mountain and realize the lesson of peace of that supreme law, "Love thy neighbor as thyself." The Divine Master Jesus, the Jew, the personification of concord and love, points out to the two republics their future path, and the love which will make of humanity in the generations to come, one world-wide family, and the whole earth the home of peace!

The statue cost about $100,000 and was paid for by popular subscription, the working classes contributing liberally.

"Only a bit of sentiment by an emotional people," says the skeptic; but it marks not a boast or a dream. It marks an actual achievement. The statue had not been standing one year when Brazil and Bolivia settled the long-standins dispute over the rights to the Acre territory—Brazil giving back to Bolivia the whole of the territory, together with $10,000,000 which Bolivia is spending in reliroads. Chili also made up with $800ivia and by a treaty of beace and friendship put an end to an old feud of twenty-six years standing. Chili is now inform Bolivia to exploit her wealth by helping her build railroads. Argentina was instrumental in oneilling a revolution in Urusuay—and all this, as I have said in less than a year from the Andean height. Surely, "how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of Him." Let us thank God that whatever the motive

Address of D'Estournelles.

In an address at the young peoples meeting this afternoon, Baron D'Estournelles de Constant advised the young people to learn to speak foreign languages in order to prevent misunderstandings with the people of other countries which, arising from ignorance, he said, lead to war and catastrophs. His own ability to speak English, he declared, had enabled him to understand the American family, about which nothing was known in Europe. The baron told of his acquaintance with the family of President Roosevelt and said that from his visit to the White House he discovered that the president's children were like the good children of any other country; not very serious, but playing tricks upon the baron like his own chil-

"If we were unable to hold conversation with each other, our ignorance would separate us like an ocean," said the baron "Instead we have been happy to know each other and I am going to return to France with a very deep impression of the American home and with an announced faith in the good will of humanity. Before my visit to the White House I had known the president only as the chief of a great state who had rendered to his country and to the world invaluable services, but I now know the man as he really is, surrounded by his devoted friends and his family, one of the most worthy of respect and one of the best men I have ever met."

German Minister Pessimistic. PITTSBURG, April 16.-Theodore von Moller, minister of state of Germany, who was at the dedication of the Carnegie institute, was the guest of honor last evening at an informal reception at the Germany club of this city. Over 300 of the club's members and their wives were present. Minister von Moller, speaking in German, said be declined the invitation to attend the peace conference at New York because there were a number of things he thought more profitable for him to do and because he did not think that any results can be accomplished by the gathering. had indignantly denied that large sums of money had been contributed to the republican campaign fund. At this moment Senator Chandler interrupted Mr. Troup. "I think you are doing the president an injustice," he said. "I wish to appear as his defender in this respect." Mr. Chandler explained that what the president had denied was that contributions had been made on the strength of promises to do something."

"I accept the correction," resumed Mr. Troup, "but Mr. Cortelyou knew differently. He should not have deceived the president He should have told him. What the president claims he was in utter ignorance of the national committee knew about."

Mr. Troup's resolution at first included the republican national committee only, but at a suggestion that this would be a par tisan movement he changed it to take in the democratic committee. This change was accepted by many members as being

Mr. Troup wanted the resolution adopted immediately, but eventually a compromise was reached and the matter was referred to the executive committee with the understanding that it would make a report at some future meeting of the society. The meeting then adjourned.

BENNISON ON HIS PAST LIFE Flaintiff Undergoes Rigid Cross-Examination in Libel Emit.

LAWYERS SPAR ON ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE

Argue for Over an Hour Question of Reading Accounts of Thomas Speech from Another Newspaper.

Tom Dennison was subjected to a close cross-examination at yesterday afternoon's session of Judge Estelle's court when Attorney Van Dusen for the Omaha Daily News, which Dennison is suing for $50,000 for alleged libel, questioned him as to his past life and as to his business ventures in Omaha. The last hour of the session was spent by the attorneys in the absence of the jury in arguing the admissibility of reports of the Elmer Thomas speech which appeared in other newspapers. Attorneys onnell and Eagan for Dennison contended the other articles could not be offered. The argument had not closed when court adjourned.

At the conclusion of his direct examination Dennison said he had gone to the Daily News office to secure the publication of a statement regarding the article and had talked to Joseph Polcar, the managing editor.

Strong objections were made by the deense to the admission of this testimony, but it was allowed by the court.

Dennison's Former Record Mr. Van Dusen began his cross-examination by asking about the witness' former record. The witness said he had been in the gambling business in Salt Lake City, Leadville, Aspen and Ogden. His last connection with gambling in Omaha, he said, was in 1901 and 1902, when he was interested in what was known as the Cliff Cole house at 1409 Douglas street. He said he was interested with J. H. McDonald, Cliff Cole, William Nesselhouse and Scip Dundy. "Is it not true," Mr. Van Dusen asked that McDonald did not have a money interest in the house, but held his interest because he claimed to have influence with the county attorney and a newspaper to protect the house?"

"Yes, but we found out his pretentions were not good and that there were men hired to throw the house and we let him

The witness said in reply to a question that he was on unfriendly terms with Elmer Thomas and also Walter Moise. "What caused the hard feeling between yourself and Walter Moise?" he was asked. "He crossed me one election. He took my money and spent it the other way and we have not been friendly since." The cross-examination of the witness was not marked by the usual objections. His attorneys announced they would allow the attorneys for the defense the widest latitude. The first serious objection came when Mr. Van Dusen sought to have the witness read a report of the speech of Elmer Thomas from the World-Herald. The argument on the propriety of this evidence was not finished when court adjourned.

On the Stand Over an Hour. Dennison was the principal witness at the hearing of the case Tuesday morning. He was on the stand over an hour and related his side of the controversy. Attorney Van Dusen objected to a question assuming that the article published in the News referred to the witness, holding no name was used. Dennison said at the time the article was published his extradition suit was pending in the supreme court and two criminal cases were hanging over him in Harrison county, Iowa, He said he felt the publication of the article could not help but influence his cases, and for this reason was very much worried over the article.

When he went home on the evening of the publication of the story he said he found his wife reading the article and He said he felt the diagrace to his wife and child very keenly and it contributed to his mental suffering.
