NEARLY HALF MILLION A MILE

Cost of Lane Cut-Off Through High Bluffs in City Limits.

HARRIMAN IS SAVING TEN MILES

Will Cost Him Between Three and Four Million Dollars to Reduce Distance This Much to Coast.

Between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 to save ten miles on distance from Omaha to the Pacific coast, or between $200,000 and $400,000 a mile, is what E. H. Harriman is spending within the city of Omaha on his Lane cut-off.

"A photograph of that cut would look like the photo of a Panama canal," said an interested spectator, as he stood gazing at the immense cut of the Union Pacific on the Lane cut-off, just west of South Omaha. When completed that cut will be over one mile long and will be eighty-eight feet deep at the deepest point. The dirt is now one-half cut and work has been done on it continuously since the first work on the short line.

"What a splendid place for a boulevard," said his companion, as the two stood and looked in wonder at the mammoth undertaking. The speaker referred to a wide shelf in the cut, fifty feet from the top and which ran the entire distance so a boulevard could easily be constructed from Forty-first street to Fifty-third street along that ledge.

"Yes, and it would soon have a cinder roadbed from the cinders spouted out by the giant engines of the Union Pacific, I think. I will have to suggest that scheme."

Hundreds View the Scene.

Hundreds of people went Sunday to view the gigantic work the Union Pacific is doing to save ten miles of road between Omaha and the west. Mr. Harriman is spending between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 to save ten miles of travel for his heavy trains. The work is the hardest ever undertaken in the west, the one cut above mentioned being 435 feet wide at the top. The fill at the Little Papio is 100 feet high above the prairie line and the fill on the Big Papio is seventy-five feet high and over one mile long, so an idea can be gained from these figures of the immense amount of dirt which is being moved.

R. L. Huntley, chief engineer of the Union Pacific, who first figured out the cut-off and who has the work in charge, says he figures the line is about 25 per cent complete and that barring mishap the grading will be complete about September 1.

"We expect to have the track laid by October or November," said Mr. Huntley. "Although there is no certainty as to the time of completing the line because of the bridges which have to be placed, the foundations of which depend so much on the time of setting of the immense volumes of dirt which are being piled on the lowlands of the two Papios."

Now is the time to make your wants known through The Bee Want Ad page.
