PARIS ROMANCE ENDS HERE Love Affair Born in France Culminates at Altar in Omaha. Raoul Laparra, one of the foremost of the younger school of French writers of opera, was married in Omaha Tuesday morning to Miss Marie Shanafelt of Monroeville, O. The marriage was a culmination of a romance that started in Paris four years ago. At that time Miss Shanafelt was studying voice in the French capital. Young Laparra was writing operas. He had just returned from Italy, where he had taken the grand prize at the Academe in Rome. The young people met and their friendship rapidly grew into love. When Miss Shanafelt sailed for America a year later she had promised to marry the young composer. He visited her once since then, Monday they met by appointment in Omaha, Laparra coming direct from Paris and Miss Shanafelt from Tabor, Ia., where ment, M. Laparra is truly an artist. A small man, with great brown eyes, long, curly, black hair and a tiny black moustache clinging to his lip, is M. Laparra. He wore a gray suit, a black silk tie that flowed all over the front of his coat and gondola boots. "Ah, yes, it was hard, ver' hard to be separat' so long." said M. Laparra, clasp-ond at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, to continue in that order daily until the great day. Sergeant Thomas Hayes will, as in years past, be the drill master and again put the men through the passa. The inspection consists of a review of the full force and scrutiny of the men's clothing and equipment, every officer bringing his accoutrements and upiform up to the fittest appearance, ending with a military review. The inspection not only includes every man, whether in uniform barn, wagons and all other property connected with the department. "This inspection business is all right for dier going to war is hard on an old man with corns and bunions," said one old bluecoat who has, to use his own lan-guage, kept one foot at a time moving over a beat for nearly twenty years; "and I never seem to get next to Tommy Haven fool shinanigans, anyway. I can travel a beat as well as the nixt, but when it comes to kaping step and walking like a strutting peacock it aint in my line, at all, at all."

POLICE OBJECT TO NEW DUTY Conservators of the Peace Do Not Like to Be Dog Catchers.

"A policeman's life isn't what it used to be in the good old days." said a member of Chief Donahue's force Tuesday morning. "Since this new dog order has gone into effect we have received orders that have changed our duties from conservators of the peace to dog catchers." "No, I can't say that most of us enjoy being the official dog catchers of the town, nuzzles with the rest of the animals and say nothing for fear of our official heads." The officers have not had to shoot dogs as yet, but have been kept busy notifying dog owners to keep their purps off the streets unless they are decorated with musgles of approved type or are held in leash.
