John L. Kennedy Entertaining Cousin, J. K. Logan of New Zealand.

LATTER IN GOVERNMENT ELECTRIC SERVICE

Declares Public Ownership of Telephone and Telegraph Lines Works Well in His Country, but Might Not Elsewhere.

James K. Logan of Wellington, New Zealand, superintendent of the telephone and telephone lines operated by the government of New Zealand, is in Omaha visiting his cousin, John L. Kennedy, who had not seen him for forty-three years.

Mr. Logan is on his way home from an extensive trip through Europe and America, where he has been investigating telephone service.

On the journey he visited most of the European capitals and many of the other larger cities in that country he visited, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington and a number of other eastern cities.

Mr. Logan is on his way home from an extensive trip through Europe and America, where he has been investigating telephone service.

NEBRASKA FROM DAY TO DAY

Quiet and Curious Features of Life in a Rapidly Growing State.

Strawberry growers say the crop will not be short. Probably a new point has been fixed for the bottom of the boxes.

Chicago speculators started out Saturday as though they thought the American Society of Equity had "made good" on its dollar worth program.

A bee inspector has been appointed at Kearney, but it is not expected he will be able to curtail the supply of "honey" from the glucose factories.

Hastings is to be congratulated on trying a murder case with possible phases of dementia Americana—without throwing the neighborhood into hysterics.

The flick of the corn planter may drown the memories of the snow shovel, but even the most optimistic can be excused if he has doubt as to the fruit harvest.

Nebraska farmers are accused of putting potatoes in egg cases and cheating buyers. If summer is as dry as spring they may find they have cheated themselves.

"Tough Luck"—But you don't know really tough luck unless you've been without coal for a month, hoping that each day's sun would banish the need, and shivering all the while.—Norfolk News.

When Car Meets Hound—Postmaster Cook ran over one of Jim Wild's many hounds last Friday with disaster to both hound and auto.

Handicap for the Blue—A hare man says ten green bugs from Texas have come up to Kansas on Rock Elyland railroad.

Confusing Names—A lady here was sent a box of house plants from Illinois and found, five days later, that they had been carried to Padlock in Merrick county.
