PAT CROWE ON TRIAL AGAIN

This Time the Charge is Holding Up a Motor Car at East End of Bridge.

TROLLEY CANNOT IDENTIFY DEFENDANT

One Witness Swears to Seeing Crowe and Levi Near the Scene of the Holdup a Short Time Previous to Occurrence.

The trial of Pat Crowe, charged with holding up and robbing the crews of two street cars at the east end of the bridge on the night of Sunday, July 2, 1906, was begun in the district court at Council Bluffs yesterday morning. The jury was sequestered by noon and after four witnesses had been placed on the stand at the afternoon session, the state was compelled to ask for an adjournment until today, on account of the failure of other witnesses to show up.

The following compose the jury: George T. Miller, J. N. Casady, Jr., F. G. Knowles, D. F. Dryden, M. C. O'Donald, C. J. Stillwell, Forrest Smith and C. B. Howard. With the exception of F. G. Knowles of Lewis township and M. C. O'Donald of Haasel Dell township, the members of the jury are residents of Council Bluffs. Owing to the personal injury damage suit of Mrs. Millie Kosky against the Nebraska Telephone company having been specially assigned for Monday morning, it was expected that the Crowe case would have to go over until Tuesday, but the Kosky suit was settled out of court and thus made way for the trial of Crowe. Arthur Levi was jointly indicted with Crowe, but they elected to be tried separately and County Attorney Hess declined to try Crowe first. Crowe is being defended by Attorney S. B. Wadsworth.

The first witness placed on the stand by the state was John Raph, a conductor. The specific charge on which Crowe is being tried is the holding up and robbing of Raph, although Conductor William Matheson and Motorman Henry Leuch were also victims of the holdup. Motorman Welch, the other member of the train crew held up, managed to give the bandits the slip.

Conductor Not Certain. Raph was the conductor of the second car. He told how his car came to a stop by reason of the car ahead having been stopped. He and his motorman, Leuch, obeyed the order of the bandits to step down off the car and were conducted into the brush alongside where they found Matheson, who had already been relieved of his money. The bandits took their watches as well as their money, but later returned the timepieces. Raph could not identify Crowe as one of the bandits because the latter wore masks over their faces.

The testimony of Conductor Matheson, who followed Raph on the stand, was substantially the same, except that he told of his car being brought to a stop by running over something which in the dark looked somewhat like the body of a man or woman. Matheson and his motorman, Ed Welch, got off the car to investigate and found that it was a large gunnysack filled with hay which had been placed on the tracks. While investigating the bandits fired over their heads and ordered them to hold up their hands. Matheson obeyed, but Motorman Welch took to his heels and escaped in the darkness. Matheson said he was robbed of $88.

Ed Clover, an elderly man and a blacksmith by trade, who resides in the western part of the city, positively identified Crowe as being the man he met with Levi at John Crowe's saloon on the night of the holdup. Crowe's testimony was to the effect that he and a neighbor, George W. Shaffer, had been to Omaha to see the steamer start up river. They walked back across the bridge and at Shaffer's suggestion, seeing a light in the rear of Crowe's saloon, went to get a drink. As they entered the fenced enclosure at the rear of the place a man whom the witness identified as Pat Crowe, thrust a revolver under their noses and asked them if they were looking for trouble. The witness said he answered that they were not, that they were merely looking for a drink. At this the witness said, the other man, who from his voice he recognized as Levi, spoke up, saying: "These men are all right; it's Clover and Shaffer."

The man identified by Clover as Crowe then lowered his weapon and the witness and his friend entered the saloon and got their drink. Clover testified that he could not be mistaken as to the identification of Crowe, as he had seen him several times during the two years preceding that. Deputy Sheriff McCaffery testified to seeing Jim Callahan and two men resembling Crowe and Levi going west on Avenue B, near Twenty-sixth street, between 7:30 and 8 o'clock on the evening of the holdup. Callahan is the man who was said to have been implicated with Crowe in the kidnaping of young Cudahy.

Following the testimony of Deputy Sheriff McCaffery an adjournment was taken until this morning. Bench Warrant for Witnesses. Mrs. Lillie C. Dalton, one of the principal witnesses for the state who had been subpoenaed, failed to appear and a bench warrant was issued for her. At the time of the hold-up she lived at 1302 Eighth avenue and rented part of her house to a man named Wilson and his wife. Crowe and Levi are alleged to have been in the Wilson part of this house the morning following the hold-up. Mrs. Dalton in her evidence before the grand jury testified, among other things, to hearing the man said to be Pat Crowe say to Wilson, "We held up two street cars last night."

Mrs. Dalton, who now resides in South Omaha, was in Council Bluffs Friday last, when she was served with the subpoena and at that time she stated her willingness to be on the stand. From the police of South Omaha County Attorney Hess learned yesterday afternoon while making inquiries concerning Mrs. Dalton, that Pat Crowe had been at her house on a considerable time Sunday afternoon and evening and again at an early hour Monday morning.

Supreme Court Declines to Rule on Merits of Controversy Over Enumeration.

CASE GETS INTO COURT IN WRONG MANNER

State Railway Commission Meets Wednesday for the Purpose of Taking Up the Joint Rate Question.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) DES MOINES, May 20.—(Special.)—The supreme court today refused to say whether or not it is illegal for an assessor to return the names of the children in the state institutions as children of school age on which the school funds should be apportioned. The case was appealed from Mills county where parties living outside of Glenwood complained because the children at the school for the Feeble Minded were enumerated as children living inside the corporation of Glenwood and the apportionment of the school money on that basis gave the district of Glenwood more money than it was entitled to. A suit was brought in the district court there to enjoin the county auditor from making the apportionment on that basis on the allegation that Glenwood was not entitled to it. There was a demurrer filed and the district court sustained the demurrer. The supreme court affirms this action of the district court without passing on the merits of the controversy. The supreme court holds that the action to enjoin the auditor is not the proper action. It claims that the law provides that the assessors shall return the enumeration of the children inside the district to the county superintendent and that the auditor shall make the apportionment of money on that basis. The supreme court holds that the auditor has no discretion in the matter and that his duty is merely a ministerial one and that such an act cannot be enjoined in the courts.

The court today ruled on sixteen cases on appeal and overruled nineteen petitions for rehearing that had been acted upon at previous sittings of the court. Among the rehearings overruled were those of Lefe Young, who was sued by the state to recover an alleged overcharge while Mr. Young was state binder. The district court action resulted in Mr. Young's favor and the supreme court overruled it and ordered a new trial. The action in overruling the petition for a rehearing means that the case must now go to the district court for a new trial. The court overruled the motion for a rehearing in the John Walker case. Walker was convicted of the murder of Isaac Finkelstein and on the first appeal got a reversal and a new trial at which he was again convicted. This conviction was affirmed and the petition for a rehearing now is overruled, which exhausts the entire machinery of justice and Walker must now serve his sentence. The court affirmed the case of Emma Smith et al. appellants against Lewis Ryan, appealed from Pottawattamie county, being an action to have the probate of a will set aside. The court reversed the case relating to the listing of property by Shields Brothers, appealed from Pottawattamie county.

Connections at Carnforth. The negotiations are in a fair way for settling the trouble at Carnforth Junction so that the Rock Island and the North-western will make connections there. For some time the time of two of the important trains has been four minutes apart. One train usually is just disappearing from the depot as the other pulls into the corporation limits. State Railroad Commissioner N. S. Ketchum took the matter up with the two railroads and the time of the trains will be slightly changed so as to accommodate the public. Joint Rates Wednesday. The state board of railroad rates will meet Wednesday, when it will formally take up the question of putting in a joint rate schedule. It is understood that parties from Council Bluffs and others from Shenandoah will appear before the commission on the joint rate question in the interests of the shippers of those places. The nursery shipments from Shenandoah are very large and the shipments inside the state of Iowa being very large, the question of joint rates is an important one. Denials to Des Moines. After several years of effort the Commercial club of Des Moines has captured the Dunkard, or River Brethren, convention for 1908. The convention, it is expected, will be held by 50,000 Dunkards and will be held at the state fair grounds, at Springfield, Ill., last year there were 26,000 in attendance and at Los Angeles this year there were 25,000 in attendance. Molders Want More. Representatives of the local foundries have refused the demand of the local molders' union for an increase of 25 cents a day in wages. This would make the molders' union a day. The contract with the local union expired May 1 and they were given till June 1 to decide the matter. Vice President Campbell of the national molders' union came to Des Moines to negotiate the increase in wages. Hopes are expressed that an adjustment will yet be reached, but the doubt is not so good and the indications now are there will be a strike. There are several hundred members of the molders' union here. Clings to Gold Piece. Mrs. Jennie Daughters set in the Union depot in this city today with a $5 gold piece given her by a youthful sweetheart. Though old and gray haired, she had sent her son to get the gold piece in order to spend the pocket piece given her in youth by a sweetheart. Traveling men contributed to her needs and assisted her to a daughter's at Kenosha, Mo. She told the story of having just buried a son at Omaha, with whom she lived, and that the daughter-in-law refused longer to give her a home. Would Pay Off Mortgage. Arthur Keohol of Fulton, Neb. is in Des Moines today and is making a search through the pawn shops in an effort to find who holds a mortgage on the body of his younger brother, Charles Keohol. The younger brother recently returned home and told of the contract, but refused to give the name of the pawn broker. The elder brother was dispatched on the mission to find the shop and pay off the mortgage. Vote to Purchase Home. The Iowa Sanitarium in this city will be purchased by the United Mine Workers of Iowa for an old folks home. The referendum vote was taken last week and the votes are now being counted at Okaloosa. The reports are that as far as canvassed the unions are almost solidly for the purchase of the home at $25,000. Eyes Examined Free; Glasses Fitted Properly. O. Mauths, 225 West Broadway. Red Oak Students Will Attend College.
