WANTED, A FIGHTING GIRL

Cornell Women Hunt Some One to Make Test Case.

ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION AROUSED TO ACT

President of Alumnae Association Attributes Outbreak to "Too Much Punch"—Elizabeth Cady Stanton's Granddaughter Talks.

If the male students of Cornell university who, the other day, in the fullness of their springtime pride started what they were pleased to call a formal campaign against the coeds, fancied they were going to have an easy walkover they may as well be making up their minds to be disappointed. The coeds, alumnae and undergraduates, are going to fight, foot, a-horse and a-antelope—not only fight for the privileges which are already theirs, but for that particular privilege that has heretofore been denied them.

For the purpose of gaining that denied, and therefore highly prized, privilege, the members of the Cornell Alumnae Association are at this identical moment on the still hunt for a girl. Not just any sort of girl, but a very select and belligerent specimen of the genus girl with a seething determination in her heart to study medicine, the entire course, in that particular branch of Cornell university now situated, lying and being in the city of New York, in the state of the same name.

To be convinced of the seriousness of the situation one has only to talk to a few of the many cool Cornell graduates now in New York.

What Miss Blatch Said.
"The feeling against the coeds is always there, we always felt it, but this is the worst that has ever happened." The speaker was Miss Nora Stanton Blatch, a granddaughter of Elizabeth Cady Stanton. Miss Blatch took her degree as civil engineer at Cornell and is now in the employ of the American Bridge company and the City Board of Water supply.

"I was the only girl in the engineering class, and the feeling against me was so perceptible that at first it made me uncomfortable," she went on. "Finally I thought the matter over and decided that the trouble lay within myself; that I was just the sort of girl that men didn't like to have around. I was actually convinced that the objection was to me personally and that another girl would be well received."

"I expected to find the same condition in the office when I went to work. Much to my surprise conditions were entirely different."

"While my work keeps me rubbing elbows with men as closely as I ever did at college, I have never had the slightest discourtesy to complain of. Now, the discourtesy can't be within myself. I can't have changed so much in two years."

"I attribute it all to the position taken by the men at the head of my work, who let it be known that I came there with their sanction.

"If the men in command at Cornell sincerely favored coeducation, believed in it as Ezra Cornell intended that all men occupying the chairs should do, the little undergraduates wouldn't take the position they do and the coeds would have an easier life. At least that is the solution I have arrived at, and I have given the subject considerable thought."

"Don't you think it a peculiar condition of affairs that one of the professors of a university should get up at a meeting of undergraduates in a drinking saloon and put himself on record as being against the very stone on which the university was founded? Well, that is what one professor did."

"What was said and done by the boys can be excused on account of their youth, but when it comes to a man as old as this professor and with his experience, that won't do. And to us who know conditions in Ithaca it seems particularly remarkable."

"Now that one professor has put himself on record, I do wish a few of the other professors and President Schurman would come out and show their colors. While President Schurman pretends to be in favor of coeducation, I know there are many girls who are sincere in their belief that his favor is not more than lukewarm."

"It is pretty generally believed by the girls that conditions in Sage, the good dormitory, would be vastly improved if President Schurman took more interest in us."

"In Ithaca we have coeducation; and if fighting will keep it for us we will continue to have it in spite of this wonderful campaign which the male students have planned; but here in New York at the medical college we don't get our rights. We are now looking for a girl who will be willing to make a test case of it."

"We want a girl who is willing to fight. Of course we will fight behind her and, we believe, get her in, but we can do nothing without the girl."

"You see the money for Cornell makes

It a coeducational institution without limit to any particular college or branch. A girl medical student wishing to enter Cornell Medical college has to take her first two years up at Ithaca. The men medical students take them here in New York. Now, we believe that that is not coeducation and we want a girl who is willing to help us fight for what we believe to be our rights under the will of Ezra Cornell."

Prize Winner's Opinion.
Dr. Mary Merritt Crawford, the girl who recently won in competition an appointment as house physician in the Williamsburg hospital, was as outspoken as Miss Blatch.

"The claim that the coeds are accountable for corrupt politics at Cornell is absolutely false," said Dr. Crawford. "It is the same interchange that is practiced everywhere and I have had men from boys' colleges tell me that the conditions were the same if not worse with them. There is a certain type of man who is always ready to lay the blame on another and when it happens that a woman is around they select her."

"The point that makes this last outbreak of an always evident, ever present prejudice noticeable is the fact that it was planned for some time. The speakers were invited weeks beforehand to address the boys on the subject."

"It seems to me an occurrence that every girl graduate of Cornell should consider and very seriously. Those men wouldn't have dared to hold a meeting for the avowed purpose of expelling Jews or even negroes. But the coeds—it seems that we are set apart to get all the kicks and criticism that is going."

"They can't turn us out, that is one consolation, and as for segregating the sexes—that would be coeducation with a vengeance, now wouldn't it? They should learn the meaning of the word and they might also find out something about the conditions named in the charter."

"But what I don't understand in the whole thing is why men who don't care to be in the same classes with girls will go to Cornell. Just look at the colleges in the east where a man can go and never get a glimpse of a girl in class."

"If they don't want to compete with us for marks then let them go somewhere else."

Alumnae Member Talks.
Miss Elizabeth Moseley Rhodes, president of the Cornell alumnae and secretary of the Inter-municipal Research society of New York, has been out of college ten years and seemed inclined to excuse the talkative male undergraduates on the score of youth.

"No, I shouldn't make the same excuse for the professor," Miss Rhodes admitted. "I must admit that I think it was a peculiar position for a professor in a coeducational college to take."

"Of course I don't know very much about the immediate circumstances, but I fancy they had all taken too much punch. I saw from the papers that it was at a class feed. Men will lose their heads under such conditions, you know, and perhaps that was the reason that the professor expressed such an aversion to the coeds."

"Oh, yes, there was a more pronounced feeling against the girls when I was in college. It was worse then than now, but nothing of this sort ever happened. At least a professor never took part in denouncing coeducation in a drinking saloon."

"The charter is for coeducation, you know. There is no danger of that being changed."

"Now, if Andrew D. White were to come out and give as his opinion that coeducation was a failure, then it might be worth while. With these young students and this particular professor it is a matter of

STREET CAR FOR SIGHTSEERS

Big Trolley Will Be Run Over Large System This Summer.

WILL TAKE IN OMAHA AND SUBURBS

South Omaha, Council Bluffs, Bellevue, Florence and Benson Are on the Line of Travel.

Beginning June 1, the Omaha & Council Bluffs Street Railway company will operate a sight-seeing car from Omaha to South Omaha, Benson, Florence and Council Bluffs. The arrangements are now for two trips, one in the forenoon and one in the afternoon of each week day. The morning trip will start at 9:30 from Fifteenth and Farnam streets and go to South Omaha, returning over the new Twenty-fourth street line to Leavenworth street. The car will then be run to the west side of Hancock park and thence over to Council Bluffs and back to Omaha, when it will be run to Nineteenth and Cumming streets, giving a view of all the retail districts of the city, and thence back to Sixteenth and Farnam streets.

For the afternoon trip the car will leave Sixteenth and Farnam streets at 2 o'clock and go to West Farnam street and returning will go out the Walnut Hill line as far as the Country club. Returning from the Country club, a run will be made to Florence and return to Fifteenth and Farnam streets.

One of the larger cars from the Council Bluffs line will be fitted especially for this service and a lecturer will accompany the car on all trips to point out the places of interest along the route. Each trip is expected to consume about three hours and to cover between thirty-five and forty miles. A photographer will take the picture of the people as they start and will have the photos ready for delivery upon the return from the trip.

One of the new home manufactured cars for the Manawa line made its initial appearance on the streets of Omaha Wednesday. It attracted a second look from all as it made the trip through the city, for it is a modern car and a thing of beauty. Manufactured in the local shops at Twenty-seventh and Lake streets, it is different in pattern from any car which has yet appeared in Omaha and was pronounced easily the prettiest car ever seen on the streets. It is an open car without running boards, with the same entrance as a closed car, with an aisle down the center of the car. It has seats for fifty-six people.

A fight is on in county court over the appointment of a guardian for Henry F. Reik, whose wealth is estimated at $100,000. Mrs. Mattie M. Mackey, daughter of Mr. Reik, but who has been more or less estranged from him for a number of years, has applied for appointment as guardian. Charles Battelle, attorney for Mr. Reik, is resisting the appointment of Mrs. Mackey and asks the court to appoint some other person. Mr. Reik was recently stricken with paralysis and since then has been at Mrs. Mackey's home at 12 North Twenty-fifth street. He is said to be unable to transact business. The trouble between Mr. Reik and his daughter is said to date back to the divorce of Mr. and Mrs. Reik several years ago.
