Never Again

Never again," he said,
"As long as the sun may shine
Shail giadness be in my breast
Or the pleasure of lope be mine,
For she has forsakes me,
Bhe has laughed at my love"—and then
A fairer maid smiled, and he Consented to hope again.

"As long as a star still gleams
May gladness be in my heart
Or glory be in my dreams,
For his favor is not for me.
He worships another"—and then
A richer man came, and she Consented to smile again.—Exc -Exchange.

SUNDAY-Miss Lorraine Comstock, supper

ner and dance at Omaha Field club and Country club.

With no one to question her right, not even the visiting girl or the most aspiring hostess, the June bride stands supreme this The popularity of the Saturday wedding, so general for a season or so past, seems to have passed and Wednesday, that "best day of all," and Tuesday, Dodge, with its promise of "wealth," will be fairly Mr. : crowded. This week, more than one person will be forced to the embarrassing necessity of making a choice between friends for hour, while every afternoon and evening and some of the mornings are planned full of showers and kensingtons and dinners and card parties in honor of the brides, all of whom are popular young women.

Music and Money Go Together

If You Have the One You Want the Other-If You Have the Other You Want the One.

It is a waste of money, time and patience to study music in the old way. New methods of teaching are constantly coming before the public, but only improved methods should be recognized. The rapid results gained by the Effa Ellis Illustrated Music Courses establishes it as an improved method and accounts for its general use throughout the country. In five miputes Miss Ellis teaches all of the notes. Parents with children and other music overs are especially invited to come and investigate this wonderful system of teachng music. Those wishing to see this statement verified can call at the Perfield Piano, Store, 1611 Farnam street, Monday evening between 6:45 and 7 o'clock, when a free lesson will be given to all applying.
