Call for National Industrial Peace Conference at San Francisco.

MEMBERS OF CABINET TO ATTEND

Plan to Organize Branch of National Civic Federation and Bring About Industrial Peace in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 20.-A call for a national industrial peace conference to meet in this city in July has been issued by the conciliation committee of San Francisco with, it is said, the encouragement of President Roosevelt. The committee expects that this national conference willeffect a condition of permanent industrial peace in this city, show to the east that the labor conditions here are not entirely hopeless and that the rumors that the "town is to be tied up" are false. The provisional dates for the meeting are July 15, 19 and 20.

The gathering will be attended by three, and possibly four, members of President Roosevelt's cabinet and by 1,200 delegates from California and the east. Many labor leaders are expected to be present, including Samuel Gompers and John Mitchell.

The cabinet members whose attendance is assured are Secretary of the Navy Metnerce and Labor Straus and Secretary of the Interior Garfield. In planning the conference the conciliation committee will have the active cosperation of the Chamber of Commerce of California, the California Promotion committee, the Civic league of San Francisco, the San Francisco Church Federation, the

PUNCHOT DISCUSSES FORESTRY

National Officer Shows Necessity of Preserving Timber and Grazing Lands for the Puture

-Public Domain.

DENVER, June 28.-In the land conven tion today the first test of strength of the two sides came in a vote over a motion that certain national organizations in dispute be admitted without further discusston. This was defeated, 348 to 231, a defeat for the government forces.

It had been agreed before the convention assembled today that to each state represented will be given ten votes and to each chamber of commerce on other recognized commercial organization five votes.

At the opening of today's session the delegates were looking forward to a warm fight on the floor of the convention over resolutions in favor of turning the public grazing lands over to various western states for local management and against "the inauguration of any policy that will result in the United States government becoming the permanent holder and landford of the remaining public lands or the natural resources connected therewith." The convention has been remarkable in that its discussions have been almost entirely confined to criticism of the national administration policy of handling the public lands. James R. Garfield, secretary of the interior, and R. A. Ballinger, commissioner of the land office, were heard on the first day, but since then there has been but one address in support of the administration. The conservatives, however, declare that the two sides of the controversy are not far apart, as both contend they are striving for changes in the present policy that will make it easier for new settlers to acquire home sites and become an integral part of the great region lying west of the Mississippi river.

Pinchot Explains Forest Policy. Gifford Pinchot, United States forester, addressing the convention, said in part: The national forest policy, as we have it now, began when the people of the United States themselves began to realize that the timber was being cut faster than it was being reproduced. The American citizen uses wood more freely and depends on it for his comfort and wellbeing more directly than the citizens of any other nation. Ours is a civilization of wood as much as it is of coal and steel. We are using every year three times as much wood from our forthree times as much wood from our for ests as they are growing. A great timber ramine is not only in sight; it is approach-ing with bewildering speed. After the first national forests (then called forest reserves) were created under the act of March 3, 1801, it began to appear that a of March 3, 1801, it began to appear that a few rich men were getting control of vast areas of public timber lands, often by methods which I need not stop to describe. These men saw not only that there was going to be a great shortage of timber, but also that when the shortage came it would be enormously profitable for them to con-trol what timber there was. Their reasontrol what timber there was. Their reasoning was good, and they went vigorously to work to carry it into effect. But President Roosevelt was awake to the situation. He saw that it would be vastly better to have some of the timber in the government's hands for the benefit of all the people, rather than to have it all in the hands of a few great owners strictly for their own benefit. Action was needed. He acted, and created many million acres of national foreats.

General Searcity of Timber. view of the action of the president. In view of the action of the president, taken to prevent monopoly and consequent excessive price of lumber, it is curious to find some good men honestly convinced that the creation of national forests is a bad thing, because, they say, it is raising the price of lumber to the consumer. It is the general scarcity of timber, not the national forests, that a raising the price of the consumer. price sentence be modified in the matter of the national forests, that is raising the price of lumber to the consumer, and this is proved by the fact that prices have risen far more rapidly in the east, where there are no national forests, than in the west, where there are many. ere there are many.

has often been asserted that the govrnment is trying to make money out of the national forests. This is a profound mistake. The forest service is not in busi-ness in the ordinary sense of that word. What it is trying to do, and trying hard, is to make the national forests pay expenses by handling them in a businesslike way. by handling them in a businessike way.

As soon as possible we hope to make the national forests self-supporting, so that they will meet the costs not only of ordinary administration, but also of trail and road making, bridge building, planting on important water sheds, and all other improvements to make the forests as useful to the people as possible.

to the people as possible. Effect of Range Protection.

Effect of Range Protection.

The effect of range protection in the national forests is already strikingly evident. In many localities it has been possible to increase the number of stock carried because of marked improvement of the range under more reasonable use. Very much of the range in the national forests was badly over-grazed. It is recovering, on the whole, with most gratifying rapidity.

The protection of the forest and the protection of the range by wise use are two divisions of a problem vastly larger and more important than either. This is the problem of the conservation of all our national resources. This is the basic problem, and it is a very practical and definite one. If we conserve our national resources, we shall prosper. If we destroy them, no amount of success in any other direction will keep us prosperous. It is the question both of the present and the future.
