MINUTES WITH NEW BOOKS

Dooley Discusses Presidential Candidates in July American.

GELETT BURGESS' QUEER STORY

Heroine is Split Into Two Personalities by a Fall Which Brings About Some Remarkable Situations.

"Mr. Dooley" tells about the presidential candidates in the July American Magazine. The cartoons are by McCutcheon. Ray Stannard Baker, now one of the editors of the American Magazine, tells the story of the "Black Belt." Walter Pritchard Eaton describes "Manhattan: An Island Outgrowth"—the story of how "old" New York, confined by wide rivers, is bursting into New Jersey and Long Island through tunnels costing more than the Panama canal. Grandon Nevins reports the new grotesque railway. David Grayson narrates an interview with an infidel. "The Interpreter" talks about the Meyer and Haywood case. Short stories are contributed by Will Irwin, Marion Hill, C. F. Carter and Edith Barnard. Horace Traubel contributes extracts from "Talks with Walt Whitman."

piece by Jacobs. "Then the Little Company swung from 'Dixie' to 'The Star-Spangled Banner.'" Ralph D. Paine has a fine story, which reads like actual happenings, of a boy's heroism, and "Old Glory in the Desert." Edward J. Phelps' account of "Pi Yuh's Base Ball Game" is a true story, and H. A. Ogden tells the tale of "Our Flag's First Engagement," a story that will have special interest for New York State readers. The department "For Very Little Folk" is rich in good things, merry pictures of "The Bunnies and the Bubbles," merry rhymes and more shadow plays by Emilie Poulsen. "The Shadow Rabbit," "Little Black Buggy," "The Fox," "The Mare," and a whole menagerie besides, with plenty of pictures in that ever helpful department, the St. Nicholas league, the editor has some helpful hints for young artists interested in comic and caricature work.

"The White Cat," by Gelett Burgess, is a psychological romance, which seems quite as impossible as the quiet old fairy tale of three guests from which it takes its title. Mr. Burgess' heroine has suffered some shock or accident, by which her mind has been split into two personalities, alternately in control of her being, with separate trains of memory. One personality is a "wraith," the other a "personality." As a matter of fact, Mr. Burgess' fiction is not a bit stranger than fact. Science has recorded many authentic cases of two persons in one, but he has departed from scientific observation in two particulars. He has tried to imagine what would happen when love entered the complex scene. With each of the two selves loving a different man, the possible complications are evident. In his commencement Mr. Burgess has been equally original. He reasons that if one shock can break up the faculties, another may bring them together again. Science provides no precedent for this. The fusion of the warring personalities has hitherto been effected only by a long course of hypnotic treatment. If The White Cat solution is not historically scientific, it is at any rate plausible. Published by the Bobbs-Merrill company.

Young's Magazine for July is a hammock number, full of breezy fiction for the dog days. The complete novel "A Servant of Sin" is thrillingly audacious in plot with a startling succession of weird, unexpected happenings that smack of witchcraft or eastern sorcery in the up-to-date setting of New York today. Nineteen other complete stories, light, gay, airy tales of love and humor, with a sprinkling of tragedy and adventure make an unusually attractive number.

"Atlesea" for July has the opening chapter of a new novel by Robert Hichens, author of "The Garden of Allah," entitled "Barbaric Sheep." The novelette is a very ingenious and absorbing detective story by Henry G. Paine, entitled "The Second Drifter." Ada Woodruff Anderson has a thrilling tale of western mining, with a love-story combined with it; called "The Spirit of the Copper Queen." Marion Hill, who has made an enviable reputation as an author of child-interest stories, has one of her very best specimens in "The Borrower." A story of the type called "strong" is "Mrs. Fenshawe's Empire Deck," by Mrs. John Van Vorst and Marie Van Vorst, who are best known as the authors who called forth President Roosevelt's famous remark about "race suicide." Joseph C. Lincoln is represented with one of his best studies of the peculiar Cape Cod character in "A Case of Trouble." Martha McCulloch Williams has a very stirring horse-racing story, called "A Hazard of Hate," while there are many other contributions of short stories and essays which add much to the interest of this number of the magazine.

A very entertaining story by Alden Arthur Knipe, entitled "A Love Story," La Carte, opens the Red Book magazine's action for July. A story which will serve as a cast light on certain phases of legal practice is Hugh Pender's "The Bride and the Bride," while Isabel Eccleston Mackay's story, "The Stuff of Dreams," is one of the most original short tales the year has thus far brought forth. A delicious account of a conflict of hearts is Maude L. Radford's "Getting Heavily at Rest," and "The Delicacy" by J. Jordan Smith, will serve to illuminate the extraordinary naval genius of Japan. Louis V. DeFoe, the authoritative dramatic critic, has an illustrated article on Edna May and Eleanor Robson. Among the other familiar names noted on the title page are: Percy Emerson Brown, Isabel McDougall, Ruth Wilson Herick, Fred Jackson, Wallace Rice, Charles Lee Bryson and Elizabeth Newport Heppburn.

"Felicity: the Making of a Star" by Clara E. Laughlin, is a unique book full of the inextinguishable charm of the theater, a tale of magnificent effort and above all a love story that is real love story. "Felicity" is a great comedienne and a lovely girl, and the people she meets and works with, the light hearted, hard working men and women of the theater picturesque with the picturesqueness of behind the scenes are all described with the intimate knowledge of an insider and the light, sure touch of a finished artist. Miss Laughlin, the author of this great story, is the literary editor of the Interior and has written many short stories and articles for the magazine. Published by Scribner's.

"SHOESTRING TO A TANNERY"

Streak of Luck of a Stranded Stock Sport in a Goldfield Game.

Jack Connor, a soldier of fortune from Seattle, walked into the Monte Carlo gambling house in Goldfield, Nev., with his pockets empty. He arose from a far table and edged through the dense crowd which for several hours had watched his daring play with $6,500 of the house's money in his pocket.

Connor had a streak of luck that would have made a yellow dog sick. He had been in Goldfield but a few short hours when he blew into the Monte Carlo. On the floor his eyes connected with a 10-cent piece. He picked up the coin from the floor, and walking over to a nearby roulette wheel placed it on "17," the gambler's number. There was a heavy play at the time, but little attention was paid to Connor's bet. "Seventeen in the black," drawed the dealer, and calmly proceeded to take and pay the numerous bets strung out on the layout. "Thirty-five for one and your money back," drawed the dealer, as he laid $3 and a 4-bit piece beside the dime. Connor picked up his money and elbowed his way to a faro game. Luck was still with him, and as he won he increased the size of his bets. The Monte Carlo has the highest limit of any house in town—$100 to cash—and Connor was not long in reaching it. The piker's soon quit, and he had the layout to himself for the greater part of the time, with a dense crowd gathered around the table watching the play. Time after time did he call the turn, until, at last, weary of the game, he cashed in, $6,500 winner of a dime which he found on the floor.

"From a shoestring to a tannery," remarked a habitue of the house, as the lucky man made his way to the door—White Pine News.

Weds Twin Brother's Widow.

It is unusual for a brother-in-law to marry his sister-in-law, but still more unusual is it to find brother-in-law and sister-in-law married when they are widower and widow of twin brothers and sisters. All of which unusual mixup of brothers, sisters, brother-in-law and sister-in-law happened in Toledo.

Louis J. Schultz, 47, was married to Rosa Schultz, 44. Several years ago Louis J. Schultz was married to the sister of his bride. Several years ago the bride was married to the brother of Louis J. Schultz. Louis and his brother were twins. Rosa and her sister were twins, so twin sisters and twin brothers were married. First the wife of Louis died and left him a widower. Then a little later the husband of Rosa died, leaving her a widow. Now both are together.

Meerschaum.

Smokers will be cheered to know that meerschaum, which has been very scarce of late years, is to become cheap. Hitherto Asia Minor has been the main source of supply, but a rich vein of fine quality is reported in New Mexico—very appropriately, people who hate tobacco will think—in the Diablo range. It remains to be seen, of course, whether smokers will pronounce it equal to the imported article.

To Prevent Shoes From Cracking. Use Quick Shine Shoe Polish. It oils, polishes and gives a patent leather finish and is water-proof. Ask your dealer for it.
