CAN WOMAN OWN A SALOON? and the plaintiff is seeking to levy on it. Pierce County Judge Says No, but

One Does in Omaha, Anyway.

A decision of Judge Welch of Pierce county in a liquor case may have some effect in Omaha when the Board of Fire and Police commissioners prepares to issue saloon licenses for the next year. The case was brought to the district court from Foster, Neb., where a woman asked to Le given a license to sell liquor. Her petition was in due form, but the license was not issued, the judge holding that under the Nebraska statute no woman could be licensed as a dramshop keeper.

In Omaha at this time just one woman holds a liquor license from the city and she holds it as the proprietor of a hotel. Last year another woman was licensed, but the house is operated by a man this year.
