Charity and the Commons to August gives the following resume of one of Mr. Lee's strong arguments for play:

Joseph Lee has skilfully pointed out that inveterate propensity of a kitten i play with a cork the entire summer, t bounce it up and down, to follow it under the furniture, to excitedly pounce upon it is a clear and obvious preparation for the kitten's later business in life of cate in mice; in short, that it is a kitten's business in life to clear and the state of the life of the life.

process is a reversal of his country experience.

We have a multitude of games founded upon religious festivals, upon war and the chase, upon harvesting grain and treading the grapes; upon love making; upon trial by combat, upon the processes of primitive industry. It would not be impossible to revive and develop these historical games into a tremendous power for the very sort of recreation which a man living in an industral city most needs. The marvel is of recreation which a man living in an industral city most needs. The marvel is that our stupid attempt to put the fine old wine of traditional country life into the new bottle of the modern town does not lead to disaster oftener than it does. The restless bounding boy and the young people whose love of pleasure is continually starved are the only ones who persistently refuse to conform to the conditions of modern city life. Those few cities in the United States which spend more money for juvenile reform than for education are deservedly held in disrepute. Every city in the United States spends a hundredfold more money for juvenile reform than is spent in providing means of recreation, and none of us as yet sees the folly and shame of such a procedure.

The ninth annual convention of the Na-tional Association of Shorthand Reporters ing all nations and all languages, is very. was held in Asheville, S. C., last week. Among the proceedings featured by Asheville papers the following will interest the profession hereabouts:

United States Judge Pritchard of North Carolina in his address of welcome said: I know of no class of people who do so much to facilitate the business of the country as the shorthand writers. I have had much experience with them, men and women, and I have uniformly found them courteous and efficient. He stated that "scores of our leading business and statesmen of today have risen from the rank of stenographer."

men of today have risen from the rank of stenographer."

Benn Pitman of Cincinnati also said that the stenographer was a painter of speech, and could trace an honorable ancestry, a since he was the descendent of those who had written their speech on the stones, as did Moses, and found his origin before there was time even. The modern reporter was the first, however, to develop a scientific method of reproducing speech, thus far excelling the earlier reporters, even though the latter were equally dexterous." I saac Pitman, he said, was the first to develop the idea of using every possible geometric line to represent speech. Those who had preceded him had based their plans on the use of the imperfect Roman alphabet, whereas under the Pitman system there were over $6.000 disinct systems.

William Whitford, a noted medical reporter, in his remarks on "Observations on Rate of Public Speaking," said:

1. That while the opinions of shorthand writers vary as to the average rate of public speaking, for all kinds of matter the rate approximately is 140 words per minute.

Mr. Hughitt then prepared for experimenting on Northwestern cars. The battery has been in operation on the North western for three months, and on the Pullman cars for an equally long time, and seems to be the light of the future. The battery is composed of a new alloy for the electrodes, and a new solution which develops the current desired up to a high degree of voltage. The plan is to make batteries for installation in houses, where a single battery will be sufficient to light and heat the entire structure. An equipment for an entire house is said to cost but $200, and the solution 5 cents a cell, each cell lasting indefinitely. In automobiles the battery is used to produce the necessary power and it has been tried successfully here
