

The Problem of Agricultural Advertisers - of Buying-Farmers

How both discover the solution of "getting together" on a mutually profitable basis as business men.

If the business man—you—with a good product to sell—

And the man—farmer—and his wife—and children—with prosperous pocketbooks wanting to buy now—today—

If you all could get together and stand over your product, you yourself believe that the cash would change hands.

You are keen to increase your business.

Farm People everywhere have money today "burning in their pockets."

Your problem is how to tell your story to the American Farmer as a "buying unit."

The Farmer's Problem is how to distinguish between the true and the false spaces that he sees covered with type and lines and illustrations in his Farm Papers.

And the Farmer as he is today—keen and prosperous—intelligent and experienced—in touch with the world through reading ably-edited Farm Papers and from close telephone gossiping relations with his neighbors the county over—

That American Farmer has got the best of you.

He has got the best of you if you don't know him intimately—individually as he is—a different man than he used to be, and even a different class man in each different part of this country today—

So if you are a business man advertising, or ready to advertise, to sell to the Farmer, and don't seek advice which is based upon success in solving the Farmer's Problem for him as well as the problems of other leading Agricultural Advertisers as to "Copy" and "Media," etc., you lose in two ways.

First—You don't get the results you ought to get during these prosperous farming times, in proportion to your expenditures, large or small.

Second—You take all the risks of speculating, when with the right kind of advice your expenditures would be a profitable investment.

Do the results you are now getting satisfy you that you have cut down the element of speculation in your Agricultural Advertising to the most profitable investment basis?

Think that over and remember that you will put yourself under no obligations by writing for an interview with a Lord & Thomas representative. Lord & Thomas will be sent anywhere to tell you and show you how this Largest Advertising Agency in America has, through its Agricultural Advertising Department, solved the problems of the Buying Farmer, and thereby solved the problems of more successful large and small Agricultural Advertisers than any other Agency whose advice you might seek.

With Lord & Thomas you will find a service based upon nearly one-third of a century's successful experience with Agricultural Advertising.

The Tabulated Results of this experience will prove interesting and profitable to you when you consult Lord & Thomas about your Advertising Problems.

Free to Advertisers or Prospective Advertisers

TRADE BUILDING CHICAGO

they have proof that Higgins mistreated the 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Coplee after the murder. This has been kept from the newspapers, but it is said to have been known to the neighbors of the murdered couple and it helped in keeping up the feeling against the murderer. The little girl did not tell this in her first story, but afterward, it is said, admitted to the authorities who were prepared to offer proof of it when the time came for trial.

Verdict of Coroner's Jury.
The body was cut down about 4 o'clock by William Steckenbauer and four others and taken to an undertaking room. Coroner Wells of Cuming county held an inquest, and the jury agreed that Higgins came to his death by strangulation at the hands of a mob, the members of which were unknown to the jury. Five bullet wounds were found in the body. Three bullets had entered the body and two had but grazed it.

Sheriff Malchow of Cuming county said he would consult County Attorney McCaughlin as to the probability of a prosecution of the mob members. He said an investigation would surely be made, but he had little hopes of satisfactory results. Sheriff Young of Thurston county said the same thing.

W. H. Coplee, brother of the man murdered by Higgins, said the sentiment of the people some time ago was for giving Higgins a trial by law, but the feeling had been changed by the action of the supreme court in commuting the sentence of murderer O'Hearn to life imprisonment and in granting Harrison Clarke a stay of execution.

Farmers came in for many miles to look at the body of Higgins and the streets were crowded in the afternoon.

Higgins Not Afraid to Go.
Sheriff Young and his assistant left the Douglas county jail in a hack about 8 o'clock Monday morning with Higgins securely handcuffed between them. To Deputy Sam Hoff, Higgins, just before he left, declared he was not afraid to go back to Thurston county. He was surrounded by the fact the ruse of Sheriff Young worked so well when he was taken up for his preliminary hearing in July. He showed some signs of nervousness, but he did not think a mob would set in its hands this trip anyway. Before leaving Higgins had written and addressed a letter to Rev. B. F. Fellman, the minister who has taken a great interest in Higgins and who has assisted in conducting religious services in his cell. Fellman is out of the city and the letter was addressed to him at Lakeview, Ia. As it was sealed the contents have not been disclosed, but it will be delivered to Mr. Fellman on his return. It is probably the last message written by Higgins to his friends. Higgins was nervous, but to everyone at the jail he tried to appear unconcerned. Charles Pumpfrey, the accused Han Pak assailant, who shared his cell, asked him before he left if he was not afraid to go. "No," said Higgins. "I am not afraid. I don't believe they will do anything to me today at least."

It was the intention to return the prisoner to the jail here Monday evening or Tuesday morning.

Sheriff Planned to Fight.
Before Sheriff Young left Pender Sunday a delegation of men called on him and asked him what he would do if an attempt were made to take his prisoner from him.

"I would protect my prisoners," replied the sheriff, "and would shoot the man of the first man that tried to touch him."
"What if fifteen or twenty men overpowered you and prevented you from doing anything?"
"Well, of course," said the sheriff, "if I couldn't do anything, I couldn't do anything, that's all."
Sheriff Young from this conversation anticipated trouble. Sheriff McDonald declared he was not surprised at the news of the lynching.

"Every day or two," he said, "some one from Thurston county would come to me for a permit to see Higgins. I would have a quiet talk with them and the sentiment of all of them seemed to be that Higgins would be lynched when he was taken back. The lynching fever did not seem to die down at all."

Higgins had been buoyed up by the encouragement he received from a number of religious workers, who made almost daily visits to his cell. Rev. B. F. Fellman was one of these leaders, and Mrs. Shirook and Mrs. Patton, several hymns clipped from religious papers, a picture of his mother, some newspaper clippings relating to the case and a packet of letters, most of which were from his mother.

His Last Religious Service.
The last of these services was held Sunday afternoon. Higgins stood on one side of the organ and Mrs. Patton on the other during the singing, and both joined fervently in the songs. Members of the Salvation Army also called on him and sent him fruit and flowers. Higgins was made a good deal of a hero by these workers. It is said they promised to work to prevent his being hung, and his faith in their finally brought him around to the belief that some way his neck would be saved.
As soon as word was received of the lynching Higgins' effects were gathered up and tied into a bundle. They consisted of a Bible, given him after he was brought to the Douglas county jail, a cheap edition of a hymn book, several hymns clipped from religious papers, a picture of his mother, some newspaper clippings relating to the case and a packet of letters, most of which were from his mother.
Mrs. Higgins spent two or three weeks in Omaha shortly after her son's arrest. She returned to her home in Denver in June and since then has written to him every few days. Her last address, as nearly as could be learned, was 1044 Grant avenue.

Attorney for Higgins Speaks.

"While the crime with which Higgins was charged was an atrocious one," said Thomas A. Hollister, attorney for Higgins, "the crime that was committed this morning is one that may well be abhorred by the people of the state. It is needless for me to say he should have been given a trial. Had the case been given to a jury, the jury would have had the facts to weigh, while the public only looks on the surface."

HISTORY OF COPPLE MURDER

Death of Two Persons Followed by Assault on Daughter.

The crime of which Higgins was lynched was one of the most atrocious in the history of the state. About 2 o'clock on the morning of May 27, 1907, the Coplee family were awakened by gunshots. Blanche, the 13-year-old daughter, heard her father shout, "Fred, you have killed me." Higgins at that time went into the name of Fred Burke. Her mother, who was roused, ran out of the house and was heard to scream, "Oh, my children," as Higgins, it afterward developed, was clubbing her to death with a base ball bat. After beating them until their skulls were crushed he went back into the house and tried to quiet the children. About 4 o'clock he got up and left the house, locking the door behind him. Blanche saw him riding away over the hill on a mule belonging to her father. The alarm was not sounded until next morning. When the children screamed up courage enough to leave the house they found the bodies of their father and mother lying in the barn yard. The dogs had started to eat the bodies. The children gave the alarm and a posse consisting of neighbors and Indians from the reservation was organized and began scouring the country for the fiend. He was finally arrested by Marshal Crawford at Hooper, near Fremont. Higgins at first put on a bold front, but after being identified broke down and confessed the crime.
He was brought at once to the Douglas county jail for safe keeping. Here he told his story admitting the crime, but offering his reason for it. He said he was drunk on reservation whisky, but had not the slightest reason for killing his employer. He said he was on the best of terms with Coplee. Some doubts were thrown on this statement by evidence offered by one of the Coplee children, who said Higgins had complained of the treatment he had received from Coplee.
The feeling against Higgins was so intense his wife kept in the jail here. He was taken back unannounced about the middle of July for his preliminary hearing. At that time a rumor started he had been lynched, but no attempt was even made to carry out the threats that had been made. This time it was known in advance he was to be taken back to Pender to have the information served on him and the leaders of the mob were ready.

WHAT IT IS

Composition of the Famous Food.

A wide spread interest has been created among good liver, as to the composition of Grape-Nuts, the food that has become popular and famous the world over.

It has long been known to physicians, chemists and food experts that the starchy portion of entire wheat and barley flours is transformed into a true and very choice sugar, by the act of intestinal digestion in the human body. This sugar is indigestible and it is in condition for immediate use by the body. It is the delicate nerve centers are built up. A food expert followed a line of experiments until he produced the food called Grape-Nuts, of which grape sugar forms the principal part, and it is produced by following Nature's processes, in a mechanical way. That is, heat, moisture and time are the methods employed and directed by scientific facts gained in research.

Grape-Nuts food is probably entitled to the claim of being the most perfectly adapted food for human use in this respect. Certain it is that the user's delight in the flavor and the perfect action of intestinal digestion, during the use of Grape-Nuts is satisfying, and the added strength of body confirms the fact. "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in page.

TO PASS GARBAGE ORDINANCE

City Council Recommends it in Committee of Whole.

IT GOES WITHOUT AMENDMENT

Bill for Bond of City Engineer Approved and Report of Appraisers on Alley Behind Bachelors Accepted.

At the meeting of the committee of the whole of the city council Monday afternoon the garbage ordinance was recommended for passage without amendment, the report of the appraisers for the opening of an alley between Farmington and Twenty-fourth streets was approved and the final act in the litigation over the office of city engineer was taken in the approval of the bill for the bond of City Engineer Rosewater.

When the garbage ordinance was brought up, Councilman Zimman moved to substitute the word "may" for the word "shall" in that section of the ordinance requiring separate receptacles for refuse and for garbage, so as to permit the mixing of such substances. He criticized the position taken by Health Commissioner Connell, and in the entire matter he was supported by Councilman Funkhouser.

Dr. Connell read a letter from the garbage inspector of Denver showing that the system provided in the pending ordinance has been in effect in Denver for ten years and has proven satisfactory. He also read a letter from the city engineer, who stated that the word "may" for the word "shall," saying it would vitiate the ordinance, and the insertion of the words "refuse" on the ground that it would make the terms of the ordinance ambiguous.

Creates Monopoly, Says Zimman.

Mr. Zimman declared the ordinance was a monopoly for fifteen years, and said for this reason he was opposed to the measure even with the amendments proposed by him. Mr. Zimman's amendments were lost and a rising vote reported the ordinance for passage by 7 to 2. Judge Wasey appeared for Douglas, who protested against the paying of a number of alleys in the northern part of the original plat of Omaha. The council decided to repeal the ordinance ordering the paving.

It was decided to include in the next ordinance the provision for the bond of Andrew Rosewater, city engineer.

E. D. Van Court sent a communication saying he was ready to begin laying curbs on Hickory street, near Thirty-third, and the contract was ordered approved.

The appraisers' report on the opening of the alley between Douglas and Twenty-fourth streets was brought up on motion of Mr. Blissard that the award of $1,575 be approved. M. L. Learned protested against the appraisal, declaring that the amount of the appraisal is too small and that the alley should be the same width as alleys of the original town—twenty feet, or at least 15 feet, as he said part of this alley would be. A. S. Ritchie defended the report of the appraisers. He said the alley is necessary for sanitary reasons, a large sewer being required to care for storm water which runs from Dodge street. Judge Gustave Anderson gave a history of the land involved, saying it had been used as a public alley for more than fifteen years and had been treated as a public alley by the former owner of the land now held by Mr. Learned and his associates. The appraisal was approved.

Murphy Explains Paving Delay.

Hugh Murphy was present when notice was received from the Bryon Reed company, saying the city would be held liable for damage which may follow failure to pave the alley between Douglas and Twenty-fourth streets. Mr. Murphy explained that he was forced to buy a stone crusher to get stone and had expected to get a plant from Lincoln in time to finish that work, but delay caused by rain made this impossible. He said within ten days he would be able to lay down the work as fast as men and teams can be secured; that brick contracts would be completed in a few days.

NEW LAW FOR JAPANESE

Further Restrictions Placed Around Emigrants Now Being Destined for Canada.

TOKIO, Aug. 26.—The clause in the protection law, making ships carrying emigrants subject to official permission, which hitherto has been limited to vessels destined for Hawaii or South America, will be made to apply in regard to similar ships destined for Canada on and after September 1. This will have no effect in reducing the number of emigrants, who already are under certain restrictions, but is aimed principally toward assuring the safety of the interests of officially recognized emigrants.

How Austrian Riot Started.

SIBIRI, Wyo., Aug. 26.—(Special.)—As a result of a strike among Austrian section hands, three of them are laid up with bullet wounds and the foreman was badly beaten and maimed.

It appears that a gang of perhaps twenty Austrians, which had been employed in hauling tracks west of town, under the leadership of one of their number, refused to work and also refused to quit. The foreman, accordingly, sent for the deputy sheriff, S. O. Morrison, to arrest the ringleader, without whose presence the other men would have given no trouble.

The gang offered resistance with stones and clubs, and when one drew a revolver the deputy opened fire, breaking one man's arm, wounding another in the body, and a stray bullet shattered another's ankle. The mob then retreated and the foreman, who armed only with a pickhandle had been hardly used, was brought to town.

The crew had been brought for some time and the foreman, William Winters, had been having a hard time keeping them under control. The crisis was precipitated by his attempting to discharge the ringleader.

Strike Delays Death Notice.

NEWCASTLE, Wyo., Aug. 26.—(Special.)—B. F. Russell was very much surprised Saturday when he picked up an Omaha paper and read an account of the death of his father at the old home at Glenwood, Ia. The telegrapher's strike had prevented relatives notifying Mr. Russell of his father's death. Russell left at once for his old home to attend the funeral.

WILL SUE IN FRENCH COURT

So Says Harry Bromé, Relative to the Casanave Case.

ODDITY IN THE LAW OF FRANCE

Heirs Liable for Debts of Dead Man and Holders of Wyoming Judgment Must Bank Their Heads on This.

"I would rather go fishing than take a trip to Europe," said Attorney H. C. Bromé, who has just returned from the city capital of France. Mr. Bromé went on business and he did almost like the man in the song, "went right in and turned around and came right out again," as quickly as the boat sailed.
"The first thing I did in Paris was to get a reservation on the steamer for my return passage," he said. "When I went to see the lawyer who has charge of the French end of the litigation on which I went to France. This litigation involves $50,000. Some months ago judgment was rendered in Wyoming against Victor Casanave. He was a Frenchman who had come up into the sheep country thirty years ago without a cent. When he went back to France about two years ago he carried with him no less than $125,000. All this he had earned by strict attention to business and wise investment.
"He held a mortgage on a certain herd of sheep up there and this he foreclosed just prior to his return to France. He got his money, and after he had left suit was brought and judgment recovered on the ground that the foreclosure had not been legally made.
"I found something odd about the French law. If the heirs of a dead man do not within a certain time formally renounce their share in his estate they stand liable, each and all of them, for the whole of the debts of the deceased. Accordingly we will bring suit there to recover the amount of the Wyoming judgment from the heirs.
"Expenses High in France.
"I found everything over there more expensive than here except food. You can get a course dinner at a cafe there for $20 that would cost $5 or $6 in New York. The same proportion runs in the cheaper restaurants.
"American farm machinery is said to be sold cheaper there than it is here. But you get very little of it. In France all grain is cut with a sickle. A man may cultivate a farm of one acre. He may have a strip of five or six acres with the same amount of wheat. He couldn't find room in his field to turn a binder around. Such American machinery, however, as is sold there is old model stuff that couldn't be disposed of here. And they get caught for it, too, while for most of the goods sold here they get only notes. There are some reasons why they may sell the goods cheaper there than here."
