Ezra Fremont Dies Suddenly of Heart Disease.

WALTHILL, Neb., Aug. 31.-(Special.)-The Omaha tribe of Indians has suffered a great loss in the death on Monday, August 26, of Wajapa, otherwise known as Ezra Fremont. The deceased was about 68 years of age and had always been rugged and well and was a great worker. The cause of his death was what is called by the medical profession angina pectoris. His sudden death was a great shock to all the members of the tribe and to his white friends as well, of whom he had many, His integrity and industry, his kindness of heart and many qualities of sterling manhood caused him to be held in the highest respect and esteem by all who knew him of both races. It, was most touching to see the effect of his death on persons of all classes. All people, old and young alike, showed real grief and sorrow. Even young boys begged to see him and showed by their manner their feeling of personal loss.

Wajapa had for many years, by precept, and especially by example, urged upon his people habits of industry, sobriety, frugality and self-respect. "The white man's burden" seems an empty phrase when one knows the burden which lay always so heavily upon his heart and which lies upon the hearts of some others of the Omaha tribe.

It was the privilege of the writer of this sketch to be counted among the friends of Wajapa, and to have a long talk with him; touching many matters, less than two days before his death. Among other things which came into the conversation was the past and present condition of his people. The Ancient Order of Hibernians and He said: "In former days the Omahas were men, strong, clean and courageous; but picnic at Walnut Grove, Council Bluffs in later days they have lost their former virtues and have fallen victim to the vices of the white man, while they have not made his virtues their own as they should. I love my people and have suffered much sorrow from seeing their demoralization by drinking and other vices. I have done what store; parlor game, 45, Megeath Stationery I could. One daughter, Miss Nettie Fremont, is a teacher in the United States Indian school at Rapid City, S. D.; another daughter, Margarot, is a student at Carlisle Indian school; another daughter, Mrs. Amos Mitchell, resides near the Omaha agency. The son, Francis, is a farmer near the agency.
