Another Innovation Will Be a Cou plete Change in the Character of the Shows Which Have Been Secured

Contrary to the custom prevailing in ormer years, the street fair and carnival which will open tomorrow will not be preceded by a parade. The gates will be opened at noon and if the weather man furnishes the proper sort of weather a ecord-breaking week is looked for by those in charge.

The amusement features this year will be entirely new and the regular old timeworn shows of the traveling carnival coupanies will be conspicuous by their absence. The management this year has secured an entire new lot of attractions. Not only will the shows be new, but there will be a greater number of them than before. Sec. retary Wright said yesterday that there will be enough free shows to keep the crowds amused both afternoon and evening, even if they do not care to patronize the many other attractions.

The finishing touches were being put on the various booths and other attractions yesterday and it is expected everything will be in readiness for the opening tomo:

Millers Present Petition.

Iowa merchant millers to the number seven of the biggest concerns have presented a petition to the Iowa railroad commission, asking that it lower the minimum carload weight of flour to 24,000 pounds The comission raised the mininum on practically all products to 30,000 pounds. The millers claim that Wisconsin, Illinois and Minnesota still have a minimum of 24,000 and a higher minimum in this state puts the Iowa millers at a disadvantage.

Attached to Institution.

With tears of genuine sorrow in her eyes because she had to leave the reform school at Mitchellville, 20-year-old Mae Warrington turned her back on that institution this morning and with a heavy heart started for her home in Arcadia, Kan, to live henceforth with the parents she has not seen in eight years.

The girl sobbed uncontrollably as she bade goodbye to Superintendent Fitzgerald in the Humane society offices this morning. Her eyes followed him with a look of dumb devotion as he went out of the door. She did not seem to glory in the fact that she is now a free person. All anticipation of seeing her parents and going back to her own home was blotted out by her sorrow at leaving a place which, though as reform school, has been full of kindness and love. Th girl was sent to the reform school eight years ago. Her parents then lived in Sigourney, Ia. Now she will start life anew in her Kansas home.

IOWA STATE COLLEGE IN SESSION

Thirty-Eighth Year of Agricultural Institution's History. AMES, Ia., Sept. 1.-(Special.)-For the thirty-eighth time in the history of the institution the Iowa State college has thrown open its doors to the young men and women of the state. The large numbers that have been lining up for classification since Wednesday noon bespeak an unusually large enrollment for the coming year. The enrollment last year, simply counting those who attended the long courses, was 1,600, and it is believed that that number will be shaded by hundreds this season. 28.80 Old students returning meet many changed conditions, some for the better, perhaps all for the ultimate betterment of the institution, but some of them trying at the present time. The campus of the col lege is in the worst cluttered up condition it ever has been. Building of all kinds al most has been progressing during the sum mer. The new electric line is not yet com plete. Agricultural hall is still in process of creation. The heating station is being projected across the central campus. Repairs are in progress on engineering lab oratories and buildings. Added to all this confusion, grading has been started the last few days on the site immediately surrounding the new central building. Sidewalks are torn up, lawn is being plowed up that high ground may be lowered to a tevel where it will harmonize with the buildings. Teams are busy doing this work and causing a never ending source of confusion to the students who are returning to take up their work.

Perhaps no class will be met with a mor stern problem than will the athletes of the institution. They left the college at the end of the spring term fully intending to return and take up their respective abodes at the quarters this fall. But, alas, the quarters have succumbed to the hand of. mprovement during the summer and has been razed to the ground. Nothing remains save the site where the building once stood. What the athletes will do for a training table is not known. The problem facing the department is indeed a serious from the street car station to the build- one. Jack Watson is on the ground, having been in Ames all summer. Clyde Wilwill be the same. The figures sept by liams is expected to return next week.
