UNANIMOUS SENTIMENT FOR IT

Merchants and Directors Are Determined to Make Fourth Annual Exhibition the Best of All.

October 14 to 19 has been decided upon as the date for the Omnha horse show. Manager Wilkins, who was manager last year, has been re-engaged and will be in Omaha September 10, to begin the work and other arrangements are nearing completion for Omaha's fourth annual horse show. The directors have sounded the merchants on the proposition of holding a show this year and all have been unanimous in advising that the show be held in spite of the fact that Omah will be the only city in the west with push enough to give a horse show in the face of the giant forward strides the automobile is ninking. In spite of the fact the association in Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City have cancelled their show for this fall the Omaha directors have decided to go ahead and make the fourth larger and grander than any of its predecessors. "This will be a feather in the cap of Omaha," said E. P. Peck. The fact will be heralded broadcast all over the land that Dobbin is still able to hold his own in Omaha at least and that in spite of the great prosperity which is sweeping over the land and keeping the thoughts of men engaged on business affairs, men of and energy to paying their respects to the Omaha does not propose to take a back seat just because the associations of other western cities lay down on their

The Italian's chance acquaintance picked up the somewhere and divide the roll and keep mum about it. The plan was eagerly entered into by the Italian, and just about the time they were to put the plan in execution the man who dropped the roll turned back, and, seeing the alleged roll in the hands of the Italian's friend, demanded that it be restored to him. The friend, however, discreetly skinned a $50 bill off the roll and handed the balance to the man who claimed to have lost it, who was very profuse in his thanks for the return of the money. After he had gone away the friend proposed to divide the $50 bill with the Italian. The Italian did not have $25, but did have $12, and turned it over to his friend, who gave him the bill and said he would wait for him until he got it changed and then he could pay him the other $13. The Italian discovered something when he went to change the bill and bank bill of the vintage of 1859. He came out to find his friend, but he had gone. It was through typical stool pigeon work that Hedgepeth gained his parole from the Jefferson City prison, where he had been sent on a twenty-five-year sentence for a train robbery. A mutiny occurred and he betrayed to the officers the confidences of his companions and he also gave up enough evidence to capture and convict Holmes, the "wife murderer" of Philadelphia, who had married and killed a number of young women. These acts curried favor with the officials of the prison, but they also show that he was without honor even in dealing with men of his own kind
