The Ak-Sar-Ben ball and horse show are beginning to loom up on the autumn calendar and society is beginning to consider how it shall be gowned, who is to be queen and whether a box is greatly preferable to "seats." From every quarter where fancy or facilities could take them furs and winter cloths free of moth balls and make ready for the more formal seaevents a success, a glimpse at the order books of some of the local modistes and at the check books of certain prominent society leaders would dispel it.

It is certain, however, that unless the ball committee improves upon its methods of the past two years and extends its invitations to the ladles of the court and ladies in waiting at least a week before the night of the coronation the out-of-town attendance at that ceremony will be materially smaller than it has been in past

BEST OF ALL ILLUMINATION Most Brilliant Display for Ak-Sar-Ben Will Be Made This

"The street illumination during Ak-Sar-Ben week will be the most beautiful we have ever had," declared City Electrician Michaelsen Saturday. The plans for the street lighting have been completed and whose wedding will take place Wednesday the stringers for the lights are now being placed. About 6,000 incandescent lights will be used, 500 more than last year.

The principal features of this year's Louise Peck will give a tally-ho party, ilumination will be the arches across the main streets of the business section. These will give a luncheon at the Country club: will be supplemented at the intersection Wednesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Ewing by festoons. There will be four of these Brown, dinner at the Field club; Thurs- at each intersection, one festoon running day, Miss Jean Cudahy and Miss Bess from the center of the intersection to the corner. The usual stringers of side lights will border the principal streets. All of the lamps will be clear except those at the intersections which will be red. Mr. Michaelsen promises the lights will be ready opening night and will be used ten nights.
