

ANDREW J. HANSCOM DEAD

Omaha and Nebraska Pioneer Dies at New York Home.

WILL BE BURIED IN OMAHA

Daughter, Miss Virginia Hanscom, with Him to the Last and George E. Pritchett Goes East.

Andrew Jackson Hanscom, 70 years of age, another Omaha and Nebraska pioneer, is gone. He died at his home, 1754 Avenue Hotel, in New York, at 2 a. m. Wednesday. He will be buried at Prospect Hill cemetery in Omaha on a day yet to be determined. His daughter, Virginia Hanscom, his constant companion through the advancing years of his life, was with him at death. Andrew J. Pritchett, his son-in-law, was on his way, having left Omaha in response to a telegram just a few hours before Mr. Hanscom died. Mrs. Pritchett had been seriously sick and was unable to accompany her husband. She is recuperating at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John L. Kennedy, 40th Street, New York city.

News of the death came to the family in Omaha and also to John W. Robbins, Mr. Hanscom's local business representative, in telegrams early Wednesday from Miss Hanscom. It soon spread over the city which Mr. Hanscom helped to build and where he was known to everybody one way or another. The news was no shock, as it had been apprehended for some time. Mr. Hanscom was sick for a considerable period.

Mr. Hanscom had survived his wife. They leave three children, Mrs. George E. Pritchett, who was married to George; Miss Virginia Catherine and James Dame Hanscom. Two children died in infancy.

Omaha Pioneer in Every Way. Andrew J. Hanscom was an Omaha pioneer in the broadest sense of the word. He came here in the autumn of 1854—a close follower of Major William B. Snowden, who is acknowledged to be the first white settler on the ground that now comprises the city of Omaha. From 1854 until he removed to New York a few years ago, Mr. Hanscom was a continuous resident of this city. He was born at Detroit, Mich., February 23, 1837.

Mr. Hanscom was one of the men who helped make Omaha and the state of Nebraska. His name is indelibly impressed upon every page of the early history of state and city. He saw Omaha grow from a frontier steamboat landing into a metropolitan city; he saw Nebraska grow from a free plain into a populous state—and he was a prominent factor all the while. As to wealth, few men have been more successful. He leaves an estate estimated from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000. Fortune tellings in real estate acquired when land was cheap, and the shrewdness to build upon the foundation thus laid, account for the financial achievements of this departed pioneer.

How He Came to Omaha. But for the California gold excitement, Mr. Hanscom might never have been a resident of Omaha. He was a '48er and reached Council Bluffs on his way to the coast in that memorable year. Council Bluffs at that time did not fair to become a prosperous city, although it had not emerged from the embryo stage. Mr. Hanscom was impressed with the possibilities of a future there and his California project abandoned. He had married before leaving Detroit and after deciding to locate in Council Bluffs, he went to the city and had some means, and he built a mill and engaged in merchandising. True to the foresight and business tact that afterwards became such a predominant characteristic of his life, he was one of the first to see that Omaha was the logical outdistance Council Bluffs in commercial supremacy. He enhanced locating here—and that chance was a winner.

Along with his other accomplishments, Mr. Hanscom was versed in law, and was a practitioner in Omaha and in Nebraska. Real estate, however, was his strong forte and in later years his large holdings demanded all his attention. He pre-empted 40 acres of land in what is now the southwest part of the city—then an untenantated waste, the wreckage of which did not seem to be particularly desired by his less sagacious neighbors. He also bought "claims" from numerous settlers who became discouraged in the midst of their primitive surroundings.

Spanker Territorial House. Mr. Hanscom was the speaker of the first legislature of Nebraska, which convened in Omaha on January 16, 1855. He was at that time perhaps the most widely known character in the sparsely settled territory. He also served in the next session. Another distinction was his membership in the first Board of Education ever organized in Omaha, and was also a member of the city council in the early days.

It seemed that Andrew J. Hanscom possessed the magic of Aladdin, for every venture he undertook was crowned with triumph. The first pretentious residence built in Omaha was the Hanscom home on grounds bounded by Capitol avenue and Davenport streets on the south and north, and Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets on the east and west. It was at the time of its erection perhaps the most costly mansion in any of the Missouri river cities. Mr. Hanscom subsequently sold it. The first substantial building in Omaha was built by Mr. Hanscom at the southwest corner of Fifteenth and Farnam streets. The second real estate transaction ever recorded in Douglas county involved the name of Mr. Hanscom as purchaser—$900 for six lots that could not now be bought for many times that sum. In 1856 Trinity cathedral was organized on a very modest plan. In the case of the building, Andrew J. Hanscom was first and foremost. He was enrolled as one of the original parishioners. Trinity cathedral of 1856 was little like the Trinity cathedral of today. It was humble shanty on lower Farnam street built on ground that nobody claimed.

Park to Perpetuate Name. Perhaps the one act above all others that stands as a monument to the memory of Andrew J. Hanscom was his presentation to the city of the beautiful park that bears his name. In October, 1872, Mr. Hanscom and James G. Megeath donated fifty-seven and one-half acres of land in the southwest part of the city to be used for park purposes. The only stipulation in the deed was that the municipality should make certain improvements from time to time. The land thus donated was a part of the 40 acres pre-empted by Mr. Hanscom when he first located here.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE MARKET

Heavy Liquidation in All Lines from All Quarters.

BULLS CONTINUE TO RULE

Prices Carry Decided Weak Undertone, However, Despite the Excellent Demand and the Export Trade.

There has been very heavy liquidation in all grain and it has been coming from all quarters. The situation still continues to be one of heavy liquidation, and some good undertone in spite of the excellent demand and export trade. Wheat and prices were off several fractions, unable to hold against the heavy liquidation of the last two days. Export trade is excellent, and cables were firmer this morning. September wheat opened at 85c and closed at 84c. Corn was steady, and the market firm. The market was strong and steady, and some good strength was shown by heavy buying and good demand. General corn reports are bullish, firm up and holding prices high. September corn opened at 55c and closed at 54c. Oats were more firmer, with cash and commission houses buying at the opening. The market was strong and steady, and indeed only most trivial, was settled peacefully. It was a fortunate time for Omaha that Mr. Hanscom was a man not afraid to fight. On two different occasions I know which the weaker was victorious, on certain defeat in the fight for the location of the capitol. He was elected to the legislature where his principal support in the house was A. J. Poppleton. Hanscom was chosen speaker on the issue of removal of the capitol, which had been located in Omaha since 1854. The removal of the capitol was a long and hard fight, but Mr. Hanscom was successful. The capitol was moved to Lincoln, Nebraska, in 1882.

As a speaker Mr. Hanscom was a model of force if not of parliamentary excellence. Samuel E. Rogers and myself were members of the upper house of the legislature at this time, and so I know all about the strong fight he made for Omaha in those days. Once Mr. Decker of Otoe county was on his feet clamoring for the floor, Hanscom and Poppleton did not want him to have it and exchanged certain winks and nods and looked at each other. But Mr. Decker insisted. Finally the speaker glared at him and shouted, "If you don't sit down I'll come over there and knock you down." Mr. Decker immediately witted into his chair.

On at least two occasions I saw Hanscom without the aid of his spectacles. He was the lobbyist of the capitol with the aid of two pistols. During his second term in the legislature he kept the legislature from taking action for a whole month by the mere force of his character and personality. There was a strong anti-Omaha majority at that time and they were bent on taking the capitol away from us. "After the admission of Nebraska as a state and when Omaha's supremacy was assured Mr. Hanscom retired as much as possible from public affairs. But he always had a large influence on account of his simple force of brain and his solid business integrity. He was always influential in Union Pacific affairs and in the affairs of the railroads which came later.

There's a Fortune in It. Irrigated lands in Snake River valley of southern Idaho produce the largest and best crops. The warm south slope of the North Side Tract is ideal for orchards. 150,000 acres will be opened to entry October 1. Fall North Side Land and Water company, Milner, Idaho.

CASE OF SWITCHING CHARGE If Merriam & Holmquist Are Hit by One Road, They Are Hit by Another. "If it is true, as the Merriam & Holmquist company tells the Interstate Commerce commission, that certain roads discriminated in favor of the Updike Grain company in the matter of switching charges, it is also true that the Missouri Pacific discriminated in favor of the Merriam & Holmquist company," said a man who attended the grain investigation before the Interstate Commerce commission a year ago. "It is a case of whose dog is bitten."

NOT A CONVICTION IN COURT Nothing Done Before Police Bar Since Altstadt Relinquished Crawford Fled. Wednesday was a record day in police court, as there was not a single conviction. Contented with the record, Judge Fiedler Crawford, but in every one of the defendant was discharged or the case was dismissed without a trial. Clerk Mahoney sat on his high stool and chewed a penholder, for he collected no money in fines and was not called upon to make a single arrest. He could not afford to chew anything else. The judge's fishing trip seems to have put him in a lenient mood, or perhaps the three-day regime of Shudge Altstadt has so frightened the evil ones that they intend to be good for a day or two.

Conflicting Influences Cause Constant Fluctuation of Values.

FEW NET CHANGES AT CLOSE

Lower Prices for Metals Cause Downward Tendency in Industrials—More Cheerful View Taken of Money Situation.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—The sentiment of speculators (far as could be read in the action of the stock market) was in the movement shifted constantly in response to conflicting influences, first on one side and then on the other. An assortment of copper stocks made distinct line of cleavage through the market as it did yesterday. The market was generally lower, and this was the dominant factor in the copper industrials. The general market was inclined to be more cheerful and at times did so successfully. The movement was altogether professional and showed no uncertainty after yesterday's decline were given credit for much of the buying. The forcing markets were termed closely after the New York market sentiment showing some improvement over the closing of the previous day. The market was not so successful. WOMAN FIGHTS FOR HER COW

Charges that Dog Catcher Tried to Take It or Coney from Her.

Take It or Coney from Her

Complaint has been made to the police concerning one of the dog catchers, supposed to be Walter Gunn. Mrs. Jennie Dean of 70 North Thirty-second street has sworn out a warrant for his arrest, alleging that she was a cow and she attempted to make her pay $1.50 to save her cow from being taken to the pound. She was making it out on a vacant lot near her home, she declares, from which she has obtained permission from the owner of the property. The dog catcher drove up and asked the woman to take her cow to the pound. She refused to do so and the dog catcher attempted to take her cow.
