Lincoln and Denver Tie. DENVER. Sept. 13.-Wrangling and offers Most of this was in the eighth and ninth innings, when things were so close that even the spectators meditated assaults on each other. Denver made tuns in the first and second innings on hitting, and did not get another hit until the eighth. Then a dispute arose in which Stimmel and Wheeler offered to assassinate each other, but were prevented by the umpire. Hard hitting in the seventh gave Lincoln three nitting in the seventh gave Lincoln three runs and an error gave another in the ninth. Wheeler opened Denver's half of the finth with a home run.
