PRANK C. CLARK, Times Bldg. New York FRUIT BRINGS HIGH PRICE

Existence of a Local Trust. Is there a fruit growers' trust in Omaha? Well, the Retail Merchant evidently thinks so, judging by this article in the last issue: so, judging by this article in the last issue:

The Nebraska-lowa Fruit Growers' association seems to have a grip on the fruit prices this year and is holding up the prices this year and is holding up that prices higher than ever before in this city, which was evident by the prices that black-berries brought during the season, not going below $2 at any one time, although the crop this year was the largest ever produced in this section.

Grapes are now coming in in good quantities at a price never heard of before, while with an ordinary crop in the past they brought about 12% cents a basket, they now bring 25 to 30 cents.

Rie Omaha Grape Growers' association is shipping four carloads of grapes a day is shipping four carloads of grapes a day from Florence and the Council Bluffs Grape Growers' association six cars from Council Bluffs. Many say that grapes are so plentiful around Omaha that were it not for these associations, which set the prices, grapes would be seiling at 12 or 15 cents a basket. The growers retort that while the fruit is plentiful close in Douglas county, Nebraska, and Pottawattamie county, Iowa, on the whole it is a very short crop in Nebrasks, Iowa and Kansas. They can get good prices by shipping the
