HEIMROD HOME FROM SAMOA that Kinelman took enough at one time

PERENNIAL SUMMER ON ISLAND

Intersting Story on Cultured People in Distant Land Told by Omahan Who Spent Six Years There.

George Heimrod, United States consul general to the islands of Samos, arrived in Omaha Tuesday morning after a six years' absence and is at his home, 404 North Twenty-third street. He was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Dora Heimrod. The trip from the islands to Omaha required thirty-eight days. They brought home many curios and a vast fund of information about the natives and their interesting manners and customs. They have a leave of two months. Samoa is a paradise where it is summe all the year round, where the cocoanut, the bread fruit and the banana trees bear abundant food without cultivation and where the people have but to pluck and eat. The inhabitants of this paradise are naturally endowed with the qualities which are generally conceived to be the products only of civilization, culture and long striving after ideals; the Samoans are dignified, they are extremely polite and hospitable; they are inimitably graceful, they are cleanly, they love knowledge and the gift of oratory is their birthright. "Where the Samoans get these gifts of which they are possessed I do not know." says Mr. Helmrod." If we believe that such things are the result of heredity and training through generations we are at a loss to explain the native culture of this Do You Feel Snug and Comfortable people. In the first place, they are models of physical development. All are of good stature and with magnificently developed muscles; yet they do little manual labor. They are supremely dignified; this is their instinct. The smallest urchin, even though features like a young prince. Most Hospitable People.

"Yes, they are not haughty, but, on the contrary, most hospitable. When a stranger comes into town they strive to do him honor. He is invited into the house of some native, the best mats are spread, he is asked to sit down, refroshments are brought and the belle of the village is called in to make a bowl of fragrant 'kava,' the national drink. Their grace of movement is as unap proachable through training as is their natural dignity. For example, a Samoan girl will not, in picking up a piece of cloth, grasp it with her whole hand. She will take it up most daintily with the thumb and one finger and with a wave of unspeakable grace. Remember, this is not company manners,' but is natural and instinctive and she does the same even when she is alone. "The Samoans are all Christians and very devout Christians. They all nave thing. Bibles in their homes. They all go to ! church three times each Sunday and, possibly, three evenings during the week. of their old religion as, for instance, in the evil spirit, 'Aeto.' They were communists or socialists before the missionaries came to the islands and, therefore, it was easy to convert them to Christianity. The majority are Congregationalists, with some Methodists and Catho Hes. Temperature of the Islands. "The temperature in Samos averages 76 degrees Fahrenheit. It never gets notter than 98 degrees in the shade and never colder than 65 degrees. But the atmosphere is moist and the heat is so enervating that it is impossible for a white man to do manual labor there Whites wear either sliks or suits of white muelin. The natives wear nothing except a piece of cloth tied around the loins and reaching half way to the knee. Even dressed so their dignity is more impressive than that of many a man in a full ong in shape. They are made of pillars, usually of the wood of the bread fruit tree, from the tops of which the roof rises. The whole is built without the use of a nail. All the pieces are bound together with fibre of the cocoanut tree and the roof is of sugar cane thatch. It is a marvelous and beautiful piece of work. "The chief products of the islands now are copra, cocoa and rubber. The cultivation of the latter is just beginning. Last year the German islands alone produced more than 10,000 tons of copra, whice is largely used in the manufacture of confectionery. Mr. Heimrod was well acquianted with Matasfa, who was king of the islands before they were divided up between Germany. England and the United States. Matanfa is now very old. Mr. Heimrod' has a beautiful Samoan mat, a gift from The home of the Heimrods in the city of Ania was less than four miles from the house where Robert Louis Stevenson did much of his literary work. This stands high up on one of the surrounding hills and the novelist's grave is on the highest peak of the hill.

Dr. Solf, the governor of the German islands, was on board the ship at Apia with a party of business men to give Mr. Heimred farewell on his departure for the United States.
