LIBRARIANS OF STATE MEET

Forty Present at Opening Session in been selected by the Iowa State Teachers' Carnegie Building.

DISTRICT SESSIONS DISCUSSED

Not Altogether a Success, but Sentiment is in Payor of Giving Them a More Extended Trial.

While an attendance of over forty librarians and members of the Boards of Trustees of the free public libraries of the principal cities of the state, the Iowa Library association began its eighteenth annual meeting yesterday afternoon in the auditor tum of the Council Bluffs public library, one of the magnificent buildings in the state erected through the liberality of Andrew Carnegle.

The meeling was called to order by Miss Ella M. McLoney, president of the association and librarian of the Des Moines public library. Before making her annual address the president called upon Hon. John M. Galvin, president of the Council Bluffs Library board, who in a neat talk welcomed the visitors and gave a short historical sketch of the city. Mr. Galvin laid special stress on the importance of the meeting to Council Bluffs, as it would undoubtedly tend to increase interest in the work, aims and purpose of the public library among the citizens generally. He also paid the librarians of the state a high compliment on their work and the good they were doing for their respective com-

Mr. Galvin was followed by M. E. Rohrer, for several years president of the local most valued members, who addressed the meeting briefly, citerating the welcome extended by the previous speaker.

But he has one of the most perfect and copying allbis that any criminal ever presented. His alibi is admitted to be a clear and conclusive evilence that he was not in Council Bluffs at the time the murder was committed.

> He has secured a hotel register from a little town over in Ohlo showing that he was registered at that hotel and has produced corroborative evidence to show that he was at the hotel at such a time that it would be impossible for him to have reached Council Bluffs in time to commit the murder of the saloon keeper. With the other evidence is the sworn testimony of a conductor of a Northwestern train that Rogers was on his train when he pulled into Council Bluffs about three hours after the murder. Following the murder the police started out to round up all the criminals and Rogers having reached the town was rounded up with the rest. The authorities who accomplished Rogers conviction, are, however, resisting the parole of Rogers on the ground that whether he committed the crime or not that he is a notorious criminal and should be kept in the penitentiary on general principles. He began his sentence March 1. 1904, for killing Bert Forney. Governor Cummins has considered his application for some time, but has now turned it over to the new board of parole.
