The wheat market was erratic, but the general tendency was toward higher prices. The immediate opening was easy because of a decline in Liverpool, but the market soon rallied because of a decrease of 1,575,000 bushels in the available supply of stocks of wheat in this country. The market developed additional strength because of a firm close at Liverpool. This upturn was followed by a slump of about 1%c because of an increase of 1,590,000 bushels in the visible European supply, compared with an increase of 1,500,000 bushels for the corresponding time last year. A slack demand for cash wheat also weakened the market. Oct. 15.—The great sensitiveness of the stock market to unfavorable factors was demonstrated by its action today in the face of several incidents. The most conspicuous was the greatly exaggerated version of the incident in San Francisco, which gained currency on the floor of the Stock exchange, the story there detailed dealing with a supposed general riot and the death and maining of a large number of Japanese subjects. The market sold off on the circulation of this rumor, but rebounded with vigos upon the receipt of accurate details of the occurrence.

CATTLE—Receipts of cattle this morning were quite liberal. 300 cars being reported in the yards. There were none too many, however, to supply the requirements of the market. The demand seemed to be good for all desirable kinds and the market as a whole was in a very antisfactory condition. Packers all seemed to want fat cattle and as there were a few loads of right desirable killers in sight the market opened in fairly good season and there was sufficient activity to the movement to effect a clearance of the bulk of the receipts in fair season. The prices paid did not show any material change, the market being fully steady. There were some better cattle, though, which made the sales look better on paper. 8.279 4.995

SHEEP—The official count showed the receipts yesterday to have been 30,739, a very liberal run even for a Monday. As noted yesterday, the market opened a little slow owing to the fact that country buyers were late in arriving, but when once underway, the market was fairly active, and before the close practically everything in sight was cleaned up. The big decline at Chicago last week, however, made itself felt and prices on reseders, especially lambs and was created up. The olg decline at Chicago last week, however, made itself felt and prices on resders, especially lambs and ewes, were generally lower.

This morning's receipts, though not nearly as large as yesterday, were still liberal, making the total for the two days very sixable. As was the case yesterday, packers all wanted a few killers and practically everything that would do for killers changed hands early in the morning. The prices paid did not show any material change. Sheep were is especially good demand and prices were firm. The big break in the Chicago lamb market last week made the feeling on lambs very weak, and there is no question but what with anything like liberal offerings, prices even on the best killers would be considerably lower. With so few coming, however, it is very hard for packers to force any concession.

very hard for packers to force any con-cession.

The market on feeders began about where it left off yesterday. The attendance of country buyers was good and the trade was fairly active at about the same prices as prevalled yesterday afternoon. This means that feeder lambs were generally logific lower than hist week, swes in some cases showing more decline than that. Freder wethers and yearlings being in lighter supply would not show so much change. change.

IN THE FORUM OF THE C. P. One Wife Who Knows How to Handlo Husbands.

SIMPLE WHEN YOU CATCH ON

Passenger Pays His Fare Every Time He Sees the Conductor Pass Him and an Explosion Follows.

Many a man fondly faucies by is the ruler in his own house when, as a matter of fact, he is merely the husband of a tactful woman. Such a man is fortunate. Here is a little episode from an Omaha home that lilustrates the above domestic maxlm:

The tactful wife looked about her in the afternoon and saw first, that the weather had turned cold and therefore the furnave would have to be started; second. that the furnace had not been cleaned and therefore this could not be done; third. that her son was away from home and therefore he would not do it; fourth, that hubby would be home late in the afternoon, tired with a day's work, and therefore not anxious to tackle the furnace; further, that he would be inclined to look with disfavor, to say the least, upon the absence of his son at a late hour in the day when the furnace required a strong

Now, some women would have stated the facts bluntly, not to say autoschediastically, to their lords, and allowed them to make the best of it. Not so this woman of tact. She sized up the situation and smiled calmly as her worser half came in at the front door, all unconscious of his mpending fate.

After she had greeted him her voice took on a note of pity and sympathy.
"I thing it is just too mean. John," she "that when you are all tired out with the day's work at the office you have to come home here and go and clean out that old furnace and start the fire. It's a shame, snyway, with coal so ligh, that the weather is so chilly." She continued in this tone, giving John no chance to say anything until he knew what was before him. Anyway, how could a man protest in the face of such sweet sympathy? Had the facts of the case been stated to him bluntly he might have "raised the roof" for a little while before settling down to the job. But, attacked when he least expected it and with weapons with which he was not familiar, he succumbed before his better half and went willingly to work on the furnace, thinking what a fine thing it was to have a loving, sympathetic woman to share his burdens.

And all of it was done just by tact, tact,

"That's once I got ahead of John," said this tactful woman to a neighbor afterward; "I certainly beat him to it that

A shrick suddenly disturbed the peace of a Hanscom park car yesterday morning and the conductor, looking forward to see what tragedy might be taking place, beheld the wild dark eyes of a little weasened man gleaming from his black-bearded face. "Mein gracious," he cried, coming toward the conductor, "gife me back my two nickcis."

"We don't give no rebates," said the conductor coldly.

Cows and heifers moved off quite freely, at least the kind that packers wanted, and the trade as a whole was in a good healthy condition. As was the case with beef steers there was no material change in prices, the market being quoted just about steady. There was a good country demand for There was a good country demand for resockers and feeders, which stimulated the speculative demand so that the market was reasonably active at steady prices. The country is a free buyer of exitle and a good many steers are going back into the country to be placed on feed.

every time the conductor passed this little. man the latter reached, thoughtlessly, into his yest pocket and handed the conductor a nickel. They thought strange, but the conductor, of course, did not observe that the man was duplicating his fare, for the car was crowded. The little man, of course, was absorbed in something else and didn't think of it, but when it broke in upon him he couldn't think of anything else.

"This is a great place to watch people all right, all right," remarked the elevator conductor in Union station, And, to Ulustrate his remark and prove the truth of lits statement he conflued thus: This here sevator holds about thirty people. Now, I come up to the street level and there's a crowd waiting. In a crowd you'll always find a certain percentage of fellows that push in ahead where they can and get the best places. If there's anyone going to be left it ain't going to be them,

"Well, in this elevator is where them hogs get what's coming to them because, you see, the first man in an elevator is the last man out of it. That's like it says in the Scriptures somewhere, 'The last shall be first and the first shall be last."

"There's one fellow gets on that's foxy. though. He always stands right inside the door and then when we get down stairs he is the first to step out. But as a rule the last to get into an elevator is the first to get out. It pays to be polite on an elevator all right, all right."

Claim. City License Inspector Ab Waggener has received news from a brother at Eagle. Alaska, to the effect that a mine in which both are interested has developed into a paying proposition and that the property is now worth $20,000 without little development. Walter Waggoner, son of the ticense inspector, will leave for Alaska by the last boat to go up this winter, which will leave Seattle November 25, and will devote life time to the development of the mine.

John Waggoner has been in the Klondike country for thirteen years, prospecting the greater part of the time with little success until he made the present strike. Samples of the ore have been sent to Omaha and one lot of quartz and some dust has been sent to the assay office, while Mr. Waggoner has two nuggets which he is showing friends.
