Young Victor went to Justice of the Peace Cockrell's office early in the morn-ing. He introduced himself and told the judge it was his wedding day and that his cart was overflowing with joy. He said he had come up to brrange with the judge to perform the ceremony and the bride-to-be was awaiting his return down on the corner. He finally devulged to the judge that although his heart was overflowing with joy, as aforesaid, his pocketbook was not plethoric and that he wished the judge would marry them on credit or on the installment plan. As his first payment he offered to put up his watch chain. Judge Cockrell told the young man he was not running a pawn shop, but rather than interefere with the nuptials he would take the watch chain and trust to the fellow's honor to send him the money as soon as he arrived at Lincoln. Thereupon Victor flew down the street and in a short time returned with the blushing bride-to-be and the two were joined in the holy bonds of

PAUL FAMILY OF ST. PAUL

Judge Thinks Department Stores

Should Have Rest Rooms for Men Also.

Judge Paul and wife, Banker Nicholas J.

Paul and daughter and Herbert J. Paul, all of St. Paul, Neb., are guests at the Paxton

"I've been all through the department stores with the women folks, who have a lot of shopping to do." said the judge.

'Omaha's big stores can't be beat. There's only one improvement I could possibly suggest in them. I think it would be a fine idea to have rest rooms for men who have exhausted themselves following their wives from floor to floor. I've been going all the

The judge is still holding the chain.
