police station there was a woman lying on her to the station on a car. At the station she talked rationally enough. She said she in a hole by a telephone pole near the spot where she had slept. Officer Hiel accompanied her back to the place and she pointed out where she had hidden her pocketbook. It was still there, wrapped in her glove, just as she had left it. Near another telephone pole was found her coat and near another her furs. The only article she could not locate was her hat and she did not claim to know where that was.

After she had gathered up all her belongings she said she was ready to proceed on her journey to Denver and accepted Officer Hiel's offer to accompany her to the depot. All went well until they transferred to a Farnam street car, whose dynamo hummed unusually loud. Before the car had proceeded a block she startled the passengers by jumping from the seat and yelling "Electricity, electricity!" scar-

OMAHA, Oct. 31, 1907 .- To the Editor of The Bee: My attention has been called to an interview appearing in your Wednesda; evening's issue concerning the screen law affecting screens in saloon windows, in which said interview I am made to say, referring to the decision of the supreme court in the McRea case, that "We are satisfied with the ruling." I used no such language. Whether or not the parties to the McRea case were satisfied with the ruling I do not know, as I had nothing whatever to do with that case and have not been informed by anyone connected with that suit as to what they thought of the court's conclusions. My position on the screen law is and has always been that the law did not contemplate more than the law says; that is: To keep windows and doors unobstructed by screens, blinds, paint or other articles." If the interior of saloons can be seen by persons passing by without effort to observe what is going on therein, I contend that the law is being complied with. The purpose of the law is to prevent the windows being screened or obstructed in such a way as to make it impossible to observe from the outside what is going on inside. All fair-minded people must agree that it is not to the best interests of society to take screens entirely from the windows of saloons and pool rooms and thereby subject women, children, girls and boys to view the interior of these places or to subject men to view these places who do not

The Independent Telephone people have been invited to add their contribution to the local democratic campaign fund. The plea for the cash is based on the assertion that there would have been no independent company in Omaha if the democratic party had not taken up the fight in the council and before the people. Last fall similar demand was made on the same grounds. It met with a more or less cheerful response, but this year the managers of the company are pointing to the stringent money market as excuse for not putting up more money than they have so far contributed.

A loud cry comes from South Omaha, where the democratic county committee has placed the management of the campa'gn in the hands of Dr. McCrann, brother-inlaw of Andy Gallagher. The custodian of the funds has dropped everything but Gallagher and anti-annexation. Other candidates have discovered this fact and have for several days been carrying on a quiet investigation. This investigation has shown that the condition is not alone in South Omaha, but in every part of the county the friends of Mr. Gallagher are making offers of almost any kind of a deal of trade to gain votes for their candidate for the city and mysteriously disappear.
