Council Hurries Through with Some Routine Business.

NOTHING OF IMPORTANCE DONE

Monthly Report of Treasurer Shows Expenditures at the Rate of Seven Dollars Per Capita for the City.

The council meeting Monday night was a hurried affair. The business which demanded the most attention was hurried through, so that the officials might miss nothing of the "parade." Among the affairs of the council, however, the city engineer reported on the estimated cost of grading Twentieth street. This was placed at $4,747.50. Bids were received for the reconstruction of the sidewalks on the east side of Twentieth street. A change of grade was proposed for Eighteenth street and the regular ordinance was introduced. The final estimate of the G street paving was allowed. The tiled estimate of the paving of Missouri avenue, $3,383.20, was allowed. An electric light was ordered for the residence of Thomas Gillispie with the forlorn hope of influencing the west side of the city on the eve of the election.

The city treasurer made his monthly report. The receipts were $9,377.04, the disbursements $25,253.30, a net expenditure of $15,876.26, including the cost of teachers. This makes, at the same rate, $20,000 for the year, or $7 per capita. The net balance for the month was $333,123.87. The council adjourned to Wednesday evening.

CODY FIGURES ON NEW DEAL

Buffalo Bill May Make Change in Show Ownership as Result of Bureau Transaction.

"The purchase of the Barnum & Bailey show by Ringling Brothers has not affected my show in the least, although I am now figuring on a deal, and that is what has kept me a week longer in New York than usual. You know it has always been my custom to hurry west as soon as the show closed its doors for the season. There may be a change in the ownership of the other half of the show, and that is the deal which is in the air."

This remark was dropped by Colonel W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) at the Merchants hotel, where he arrived Tuesday morning from the east. He is on his way to Cody, Wyo., to look after his hotel and irrigation interests.

"This has been the banner year of all my experiences in the show business," said he. "America for me from this time on, for the people of this country are a great people for amusement, and have turned out as never before to see the wild west show this year. We did not see anything like the crowds in Europe, although we were showing for a less price, for you know their money is different."

"We have been getting the best element out to see our show all summer. The church people and educational institutions have recommended the show for the way it truly depicts the life in the wild west in the days gone by. This has helped to give me the blue ribbon season and the biggest year ever had by a large show in the United States. Half of the show is owned by the Bailey estate, and from the old books it was found we did a bigger business than the Barnum & Bailey show did in the 'Jumbo' year. That was the year Barnum featured Jumbo, the largest elephant ever seen."

Colonel Cody left Tuesday evening for Cody, where he and some friends will immediately start on the annual hunt for big game.

"I am going to look into this Indian trouble, and if my services will be of any use as a peacemaker, they are at the beck and call of the government, for the Indians are all my friends now, although I used to fight them," he added.

"They tell me that on the square the west never looked as good as it does today."

The colonel is noted for being one of the greatest boosters the west has ever had. For the last ten years he has filled the eastern press with interviews on the advantages to be derived from irrigation in the west, and was largely instrumental in getting the government to take the interest it has in the irrigation enterprise, on which it is now spending millions of dollars.

BOY WITH BUSINESS ACUMEN

Turns Trick in Finances on Halloween Pumpkins that Attracts Attention of Dad.

A small boy lives on Eighth Tenth street whose money-making instincts give promise of surpassing those of Rockefeller. A Halloween party was given in his neighborhood and he observed a wagonload of pumpkins being delivered to the place preparatory to their being cut up for the evening. He unloaded them and helped carve them into jack-o'-lanterns. One of the neighbor's daughters said he was a good boy and slipped a quarter into his hand. That night while the lanterns were illuminating the front yard with a lighted tallow candle inside, showing two fiery eyes, a red nose and a grinning row of teeth, the small boy sat on the fence and discouraged the talk of other boys to steal the lanterns. He said it wouldn't be right. In the morning he went to the neighbors and offered to haul the pumpkins away for a quarter, which, as the small boy well knew, was just half what the drayman would charge. His offer was accepted and he got a basket and took the pumpkins away a few minutes and sold them to his kid friends for 5 cents each. There were thirty pumpkins in all, from which he realized $1.50, besides the 25 cents for hauling them away. And that wasn't all. He had accumulated a large pile of cash and out of the thirty candles he realized something.

"I think," said his father, "that I'll take that kid in partnership with me. He's got the old man beat forty ways."

PUPILS ASK DEBATE TEACHER

High School Students Petition Board of Education for Special Instructor.

High school pupils want a new chair created in that institution and have petitioned the Board of Education for an instructor in debating. Whether the board will make the appointment is not certain. The petition last night was referred to a committee.

Debating is steadily advancing at the high school and the pupils believe with special instructor it will advance all the more and result in turning out more giants in forensic combat.

Judges and clerks of election appointed by the clerk of the district court for the general election were named as judges and clerks of the school election by the board of education.

Unearned tuition paid by Edgar Adams was ordered refunded, as Adams was unable to attend school.

Bids for the wiring of the Tenth school were received from two contractors and for hardware from three firms. The matter was referred to the building and property committee.

The committee which examined the condition of sidewalks leading to the Seals school reported walks in bad condition and asked the attention of the city council and city engineer be called to the matter with the request that walks be reconstructed. Mr. Lindsay called attention to the lack of fire protection at the school and recommended that portable apparatus be purchased for the school and that pumping facilities be increased.

The board will meet Monday night to

A. M. Fairbrother, a well known musician of this city, who lives at 339 Farnam street, had a miraculous escape from probably fatal injuries about 6:30 Monday night, when he was struck by an east-bound Farnam street car at Thirty-first and Farnam streets while attempting to cross the tracks behind a west-bound car from which he had just alighted.

Conte's drug store nearby, where they succeeded in bringing Fairbrother to consciousness in thirty minutes. The injured man was removed to the Presbyterian hospital in Stratley & Dorrance's ambulance, where he was attended by Dr. Dwyer, who discovered that Fairbrother was suffering from concussion of the brain and had received numerous cuts and bruises about the face and body. Should no serious complications set in he will recover.

The car which struck him was in charge of Conductor J. E. Burke and Motorman P. J. Christiansen, who states that he did not see Fairbrother as he walked from behind the other car.

At the Theaters

Vaudeville at the Burwood.
To drive away dull care the bill at the Burwood this week is exceptionally good. There are nine acts and every one of them seemed to please the audience vastly last evening. Armstrong and Holly in "Back from College" seemed to catch the popular fancy especially, while Nellie Eiting and company in "Reading the Winner" and Charles Nelson Haight and Laura Dean in "A Misfit Meeting" received much applause. Preston Kendall held the close attention of the audience in the unique play of seven characters "Across the Lines," in which he takes the parts of all, making eleven lightning changes.

The Hawaiians presented their act in an especially pretty setting of scenery and costume. There are four young men and a young woman of very sweet vocal powers. They also presented Hawaiian dances, Gilmore and Castle, comic dancers and singers, and Joe Altman in eccentric singing and talking proved to be prime favorites. All this, with the addition of illustrated songs and the moving pictures makes up an exceptionally good bill for the week.

ELECTRICAL TALK AT Y. M. C. A.

Automatic Telephone the Subject of Monday Evening's Lecture.

The second of a series of talks upon electrical subjects under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association Electrical club was given in the lecture room of the Young Men's Christian association building Monday evening before a large class, the subject being "Automatic Telephone," with a practical demonstration of the same by Fred H. Caldwell of Chicago, of the Independent Automatic Telephone company, who is superintending the installation of the automatic system in Omaha, and by F. G. Zimmell, general engineer of the Union Telephone Construction company.

Mr. Caldwell gave a short history of the automatic telephone and its successful completion and first installation at Fall River, Mass., and Atlanta, Ga., eleven years ago, and the development of the system up to the present time. He explained that the system was operated by the rotary and vertical switches, working by means of delicately constructed wipers within cylindrical receptacles, and a variety of magnets, relay circuits, straight line circuits through trunk lines. These circuits were divided into groups of units, tens, and multiples of tens, up into hundreds of thousands. He illustrated the principle by an automatic telephone with a group of magnets comprising a switch-board system used in the general exchanges of the automatic system, and which are to be placed in use in Omaha. The switches consisted of two varieties, the selective and the connecting switch, which were controlled by the subscriber by a dial device, which is the essential feature of the automatic telephone.

The announcement was made at the close of the lecture that another lecture upon some electrical topic yet to be selected would be given next Monday evening, and in the near future the subject of wireless telegraphy would be taken up and discussed by an expert in that line. Cards were distributed for applications for membership in the electrical club and a number of responses were received. The fee for the remainder of the present term, which closes January 1, and for the next term of twelve lessons was announced at $1.50.

A lively interest is being taken in the electrical club and its membership is rapidly growing.

State Labor Bureau.

LINCOLN, Nov. 4.—To the Editor of The Bee: The State Bureau of Labor is in receipt, lately, of letters complaining that certain manufacturing concerns in Omaha are overworking some of their employees—that is, some employees, according to these letter writers, are entering long hours of labor. This is alleged to be the case especially with women workers. So far, only one of these letters has been signed by the party writing it, with the address. The others have been unsigned, and I write this to say that anonymous communications cannot be given any attention.

If parties who think they have good grounds for an appeal to this bureau under the law will set out their alleged ground of complaint, and give their names and addresses, investigation will be made to the best of our ability, and this without disclosing the names of the complainants. It must be realized, too, that no action for correcting abuses can be sustained in court unless we get proper evidence to be presented. No county attorney will enter upon a prosecution unless he can be given definite facts upon which to base a complaint.

Deputy Commissioner of Labor.

RAFFLES ARE UNDER THE BAN

Fire and Police Board Instructs Chief of Police to Suppress Them.

Everything from kisses to doughnuts, frequently raffled at "church" socials, were declared illegal by the Fire and Police board of Omaha Monday evening and chief of police has orders to arrest any saloon man who offers a turkey as a prize or a young woman who has a pair of rosy lips as a reward for the lucky one.

Raffles, of whatever sort, simply don't go in Omaha after Tuesday, November 6. All the trouble was brought about by Harry Fisher, secretary of the Omaha Deal Dealers' association, who appeared before the board to ask that the chief of police be instructed to use his influence to prevent laboring men paying $5 to $7 for turkeys which they could purchase at a much better market for much less. The secretary laid his point, and ex-Congressman J. L. Kennedy sustained him when he suggested that church raffles were just as sinful as billiard hall raffles.

Other actions of the Fire and Police board were insignificant. All agreed that the Sunday law should be enforced, as set forth by Mayor Dahlman, including the delivery of Sunday morning newspapers and the Sabbath work of druggists.

The board decided that it was beyond its power to furnish officers to protect every dance advertised, and did not object to the recommendation of Chief of Police Donohue that the parties giving public dances pay the officers who guard the peace of the halls.

Charges against the head of the police department which were to have been presented by Health Officer H. L. Woodruff were not filed with the clerk and both the health officer and mayor were absent from the meeting. They will be heard next Monday evening.
