All Saints church was the scene of a pretty but quiet wedding Wednesday at 4 o'clock, when Miss Bessie Hungate, daughter of Mr. J. H. Hungate of Blair, was married to Mr. Frank P. Cowdery, Rev. T. J. Mackay officiated. No reception was made at decorating and neither the bride or groom had attendants. The bride was attired in her go-away gown of blue silk with a blue velvet jacket to match. This pretty costume was completed by a large picture hat of blue velvet trimmed with shades of blue flowers. Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Cowdery left for a wedding trip including various points of interest in the east. On their return they will reside at 1235 South Thirty-sixth street and will be at home to their friends after January 1. Among the out-of-town guests present at the wedding were: Mr. J. H. Hungate, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Howe, Dr. and Mrs. Haller, all of Blair; Mr. R. C. Hungate of Chicago, Mrs. H. T. Ashbaugh of St. Louis, and Mr. and Mrs. B.

Cooper-Northup Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Claire Northup, daughter of Mrs. Jay Northup, and Mr. John Theodore Cooper was solemnized Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the St. Mary's Avenue Congregational church. Rev. L. O. Baird officiated. The church was decorated in green and white. Chrysanthemums and palms and ferns were used in profusion. On either side of the pulpit platform were two large pillars of white chrysanthemums. The choir loft was banded with palms and white candles in candelabra reflected a pretty light. The wedding party entered the church to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, played by Miss Margaret Boulier. The first to enter the church were the bridesmaids, Mr. Royal Comstock, Mr. Walter Foster, Mr. George Strain and Mr. George Emery. The bridesmaids were Miss Mayme Hutchinson and Miss Julia Colburn. They were both daintily veiled in cream silk with yellow silk. They wore wreaths of gold roses in their hair and carried bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums. Miss Louise Northup, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and wore a charming costume of white opera-ballet inset with valenciennes lace designed in patterns. Her bouquet was also yellow chrysanthemums. Little Charles Northup, Troxell, nephew of the bride, carried the ring in a white cream radium silk. The bride was lovely in soft cream radium silk with trimmings of real lace. She wore a long tulle veil, which was held in place by lilies. In her hair she carried a shower bouquet of the same flowers. She walked with her mother, who wore an exquisite creation of white lace, made elaborate with tucks and lace. The bridal party met the groom and his best man, Mr. Warren de Camp, at the altar. Following the marriage service there was a reception at the home of the bride at 1077 Georgia avenue. The house was artistically decorated. The parlor, where the guests were received by the young people, was abloom with yellow chrysanthemums and palms were conspicuously placed. The dining room was exclusively in red, the centerpiece for the table being a lot of round of meteor roses. Those assisting in the dining room and throughout the rooms were Miss Maud Richards, Miss Elsie Wood, Miss Elizabeth McConnell, Miss Henrietta Rees and Miss Nina and Minnie Pritchard. Mr. and Mrs. Cooper have gone on a wedding trip which will include points of interest in the east. On their return they will reside at 1077 Georgia avenue.

Opening Ball of Metropolitan Club.

Metropolitan hall was never the scene of a prettier party than it was Wednesday evening when the opening ball of the Metropolitan club was given. The decorations were elaborate, green and pink being the charming color combinations used. The dance hall was beautiful with its subdued lights shining through pink crepe roses. Several cozy corners were arranged and festooned with huge masses of pretty color tones. The large double door entering the dance hall was curtained with green and pink crepe streamers and held in place by loose clusters of pink roses. The orchestra was stationed on the rostrum and was screened from view by a lattice work of green and pink streamers and a bank of palms. Decorating was not confined alone to the dance hall. The large parlor on the first floor was a veritable garden of palms and on the mantle and tables were bouquets of pink roses. A course supper was served later in the evening in the dining room. Here the same color scheme was repeated and over the entire room a canopy was formed of green and

THREE DRESSY VELVET COATS

Monotone Shadow Effects Among Smartest and Most Elegant of New Things.

Monotone shadow effects are among the smartest of the fancy velvets and appear not only in stripes and dots, but in various other designs which are barely visible at certain angles, though plainly to be seen in other lights. These shadow velvets are expensive, ranging in price from $5 to $10 a yard, but they are very wide and for bodice and skirt costumes, opera cloaks, etc., are eminently desirable, though for the street costume only the simplest of the shadow designs are liked—the stripes and checks.

One of these shadow stripe velvets was the material chosen for the center model included in the cut. This velvet was in black and the trimming was supplied by heavy cords of black satin used like soutache and a little heavy black lace. A crocheted waistcoat of heavy rose color silk relieved the soberness of the black. The skirt of this model, like a majority of the skirts fashioned of fancy materials, has a bias center front seam.

A large number of the velvet, cloth and satin skirts are quite without trimming or are trimmed very narrowly straight along the bottom edge and save for the short walking skirt a circular cut fitting as though moulded over the hips and ruffling into soft folds toward the bottom is the rule. For the walking skirt, modifications of cut are necessary in order that the skirt may hang well and not sag, but the same general lines must be retained, and whenever possible it is wise to wear the long skirt this season because it is infinitely more attractive with the popular long coat than any short skirt can be.

Silk or satin-covered cords, used as in the model just described, after the fashion of soutache and made into passementerie or like ornaments are liked as well, as are all handmade trimmings; but much braiding is used upon velvet, as upon cloth, and heavy passementerie ornaments, cords, pendants, etc., are associated with the braid.

FEWER WEDDING PRESENTS

Reaction Has Set In Against Indiscriminate Giving of Costly Gifts.

The custom of giving wedding presents is much less fashionable in smart circles than it used to be. And London is largely responsible for the change.

Not long ago an English bride-to-be, the daughter of a noble house, sent out with the invitations to her wedding a request that no wedding present should be given. Previous to that several brides socially high up had verbally expressed themselves in the same way, but as it is not possible to reach in this way the hundreds of persons asked to a "big" wedding their sentiments were not known except to the few intimates from whom a gift would probably be received in "matter how the bride felt about it.

Like every other rule, of course this rule will have exceptions. Just how many exceptions the bride who sent out the printed requests has discovered is not known. It is known that the bride's face against English brides have set their faces against receiving wedding presents from any but relatives and that in London the vogue of sending wedding presents indiscriminately is dying fast. Ask a New York silvermith or a dealer in cut glass if he has discovered any falling off in the demand for wedding gifts and he will say "No" at once. What is more he will refuse to entertain so harassing a thought.

But when mothers and daughters who are identified with the very wealthy class are approached on the same subject they tell quite another story. The other day when a young and very charming widow identified with the Newport colony and the Long Island hunting set announced her approaching marriage she also announced that she didn't want any wedding presents. That she will go so far as to have a notice to that effect included in the wedding invitations is not likely. A social leader who tells Americans will go so far as that in any case. In the days when numerically New York society was under rather than over the 400 mark the wedding present problem was easy enough.

ART OF HANGING PICTURES

Hang Low as Possible and Preserve Balance Between Floor and Ceiling.

The hanging of pictures, according to Suburban Life, is an art in itself, the only rule to follow being that they should hang as low as possible. The correct balance, however, between floor and ceiling must be preserved; in high-studded rooms large pictures would probably look best hung at least five feet from the floor, while low-studded rooms may have them considerably lower. Pictures also should be carefully considered as to color and subject. Many think that different mediums should not hang on the same wall, even in the same room, but this is a dangerous rule to insist upon. Some masters paint in water color with the strength of tone of oils, and a good Japanese print will hold its own if brought into conjunction with many a carbon photograph. The advice given above for the grouping of pictures applies here, only on walls of pleasing decoration and proportion it is not so important to center them. An excellent way is to hang them according to "spacing."

Lunches for School Children.

The pernicious cold lunches utilized for school children in so many homes should be abolished. One hot dish at least should be served at noon to all school children. When soup, of the proper strength and properly dressed with grains or vegetable flavors, is served at noon, meat is unnecessary.

Business Men in Politics

"They Must Put Down the Scalawag," Says Sir Horace Plunkett.

Sir Horace Plunkett of Dublin, Ireland, Omaha at heart, Wyoming ranchman by accident, addressed the members of the Omaha Real Estate exchange Wednesday noon and predicted the time is close at hand when sound business men must make the sacrifice of pulling off their coats and getting into the political campaigns of the country to put down the scoundrels and grafters.

"We are on the eve of great social and political changes which may border on revolution," he said. "Party lines are disappearing, I believe, and the parties of the future will be classes, divided as labor and capital. These changing conditions must be met by the sound business men of the country who have been successful at their own business and they must devote some of their time at least to the study of social and political life. As disagreeable as politics may be to them, they will have to take off their coats and get into the struggle to preserve the integrity of American business and put down the scalawags. The men who should be interested in American politics are the men who could make more money and gain more comfort for themselves by keeping out of the struggle, but they are the men needed to work out public questions."

A VALUABLE HOME RECIPE

Will Break up a Cold in 24 Hours or Cure any Cough that is Curable.

Mix one-half ounce of Concentrated oil of pine with two ounces of glycerine and a half pint of good whisky. Shake thoroughly each time and use spoonful every four hours.

The renowned throat and lung specialist who established a camp for consumptives in the pine woods of Maine, and whose remarkable cures there attracted international attention, declares that the above formula is one of the very best remedies obtainable for an acute cold and that it will strengthen the lungs, relieve cough and head the bronchial tubes. Also, that it will cure any case of lung trouble not too far advanced if the patient will assist by plenty of outdoor exercise, inhaling deep, long breaths every few minutes.

The ingredients are procurable at any good prescription drugist and easily mixed at home and should take its place as one of the most valued remedies in the family medicine chest.

Inquiry at one of the leading druggists elicited the information that Concentrated oil of pine is put up for dispensing only in self-sealing vials securely sealed in tin screw-top cases intended to protect it from heat and light. The oils sold in bulk and the patent medicines put up and labeled "Oil of Pine" are to be avoided because owing to their impurities they produce nausea and are useless as a medicine, besides sometimes leave permanent kidney trouble.
