As the autumn progresses it begins to look as though this is to be a season of club meetings rather than of "functions." For close to a month the club meeting has been the most numerous entry on the engagement book, and a glance ahead shows it appearing with amazing frequency on page after page. It is rapfdly becoming evident that people who prefer something more promising than club gatherings will have to be up and doing. Even the approach of Thanksgiving seems to have inspired plans for nothing more unusual than family dinners, with a possible dance or two for the school folks near enough to come home. And, speaking of clubs, more than one hostess has complained vigorously of late of amazing disregard on the part of members of time. "They culte ignore the hour set for the game and stroll in at any time during the afternoon that happens to suit their convenience, quite caceless of the fact that they have perhaps thrown out a whole table, not to speak of seriously inconventencing the hosters." complained one woman, while others have come to class punctuality with cleanliness and Godliness in the list of virtues, 12.
