Tersely Told Short Stories

A Native Dish.

STEPHEN THAW, a nephew of Harry Kendall Thaw, is a missionary in Syria, and to his friends in Pittsburgh the young man occasionally writes the most amusing letters.

In a recent letter Mr. Thaw described a dinner that a Chinese merchant had given to an English traveler in a remote Syrian town.

The Chinese man could speak no English and the Englishman could speak no Chinese; nevertheless the dinner went off very agreeably. The two men sat facing one another in silence while a neat Chinese butler served them dish after dish of surpassing delicacy.

There was one dish especially that pleased the Englishman. It was a rich stew of onions, pork, mushrooms and a dark, tender, well-flavored meat that seemed like duck.

The Englishman ate heartily of this stew. Then he closed his eyes and lifted his hands and shook his head with an air of ecstasy. After this pantomimic compliment to the dish he said, interrogatively:

"Quack, quack?"

"No, no," said the Chinaman. "Bow-wow-wow."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

From a Constant Reader.

Henry White, our secretary of embassy at Paris, tells of a brilliant reporter on a French journal who holds a strong objection to the note-book, dear to most of his associates.

The Parisian newspaper man wears large white cuffs, and on these he is said to jot down such events as appeal to him, with suggestions for his subsequent articles. At first, the story runs, his hand was much puzzled by these hieroglyphics, but we should be glad to have you give us more political news.—Harper's Weekly.

Checks Versus Cash.

Colonel "Ike" Hill, assistant sergeant-at-arms for the democrats in the house of representatives, has violent political prejudices, and at election time is wont to back them with money.

He got into a political discussion in the lobby of the Hoffman house in New York a short time ago and made an assertion that was disputed by a man in the gathering.

Colonel "Ike" reached down into his pocket, pulled out a roll of money and peeled off five $100 bills.

"I will just bet you $500 I am right," he said.

"I'll take you," said the other. "Wait until I get a pen and ink."

Try---HAYDEN'S---First

A cold look came into Colonel "Ike's" eyes.

"What do you want a pen and ink for?" he asked.

"Why, I want to write a check for $500 to cover your bet."

Colonel "Ike" put his money back in his pocket.

"Bring me a pen and ink, too," he said, "for if this is going to be a check bet I'll make it $5,000."—Saturday Post.

He Knew.

There is a well-known federal official at Washington whose family stoutly maintain that he is absolutely color blind, a contention as stoutly refuted by the official himself.

On one occasion at the table his wife remarked a new tie her husband was wearing. "I'll wager you don't know what color the tie is," she teasingly suggested.

"It's blue," said the husband.

"Right! But how on earth did you know?"

"Well," said the husband, with the same assurance, "when I bought it yesterday I told the clerk that if he didn't give me blue, I'd throw him out of the window."—Harper's Weekly.

Congratulations Out of Order.

"The late Admiral Walker," said a naval officer in Washington, "believed heartily in marriage for sailors. He always urged sailors to wed. Nautilus bachelors were held up to scorn by him.

"Strolling with him in New York one day we met a young ship broker. Admiral Walker hailed the young man delightfully. He clapped him on the back, wrung his hand and cried:

"Congratulations on your marriage, my young friend. No more sewing on of buttons now, eh?"

"No, indeed," said the ship broker. "I wear a belt now. It keeps me so busy raising the money to pay my wife's bills that I have no time to sew on buttons."—Baltimore Sun.

As Near as He Dared.

A couple of New Yorkers were playing golf on a New Jersey course on election day when they saw a fine appearing old gentleman looking at them wistfully. They asked him to join the game, which he did with alacrity. He was mild in speech and manner and played well. But once when he had made a foolish he ejaculated vehemently the word:

"Croton!"

A few moments later when he had made another bad play he repeated:

"Croton!"

The fourth time he said this one of his new made friends said: "I do not want to be inquisitive, but will you tell me why you say 'Croton' so often?"

"Well," said the old gentleman, "isn't that the biggest dam near New York?"

He was a Presbyterian clergyman from Brooklyn.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Historical Evidence.

The late Richard Mansfield was a patient sufferer in his last illness, and he retained his good cheer to a marked degree. One day he told his physician that he believed he would not live many weeks longer.

"Bosh!" said the physician. "You are good for a long time yet. Why, man alive, did you ever hear of anybody near death with legs and feet as warm as yours?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Mansfield, "lots of them. For instance, there was Joan of Arc and the Salem witches."—Harper's Weekly.

A New Definition.

A rather cynical joke has been recently credited to Senator Platt.

The senator, on his last visit to the Manhattan Beach hotel, allowed a pretty little girl, a western millionaire's daughter, to be presented to him.

"The little girl, in the course of one of her many delightful chats with the aged statesman, said:

"Tell me, won't you, senator, what political economy is?"

"Political economy, my dear child," Senator Platt replied, "is the art of never buying more votes than you actually need."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

He Got the Job.

A traveler just returned from Japan tells the following story: A mercantile firm in Tokio, having extensive commercial relations with the United States, was desirous of engaging the services of a translator. Many applicants replied to the firm's advertisement, but one of the necessary qualifications was the ability to speak the English tongue in the vernacular, which qualification proved to be a stumbling block to most of the applicants for the position. Finally one appeared who had received his education in the United States, and on being asked if he was well versed in the vernacular, he replied: "Sure, Mike." He secured the position.—New York Times.

The Eternal Lottery.

Governor Vandaman of Mississippi tells an amusing instance of the negro's attitude toward matrimony.

A ducky 'olegman in the state named had married two negroes; and after the ceremony the groom asked, "How much you charge for dis?"

"I usually leave that to the groom," was the reply. "Sometimes I am paid five dollars, sometimes ten, sometimes less."

"Five dollars is a lot of money, pshaw," said the groom. "Ah! give you two dollars, and den of ah funds ah ain't got cheated, ah'll give yo' mo' in a monf."

In the anticipated time the groom returned, "Pshaw," said he, "dis here arrangement's a kind of 'speculation, an' ah reckon youse got da worst of it. Ah agrees that yo' owes me a dollar an' seventy-five cents."—Harper's Weekly.

Fishermen at Leisure.

The president of the National Story Tellers' league, who uses humorous stories only semi-occasionally to lulliliate serious points, was asked to give a sample humorous story. Here is one he told:

A New York school teacher was visiting at a Maine seaport. Seeing a group of fishermen smoking their pipes, she approached one of them and asked what the fishermen did to occupy their time.

"Well, sometimes we set an' talk," the fisherman replied. "Sometimes we set an' think, and sometimes—well, we Joe set.—New York Times.

Putting His Logic to Test.

The old couple were eating their first meal with their son after his return from college.

"Tell us, John," said the father, "what have you learned at college?"

"Oh, lots of things," said the son, as he recited his course of studies. "Then," he concluded, "I also studied logic."

"Logic," said the old man. "What is that?"

"It's the art of reasoning," said the son. "What's the art of reasoning?" said the father.

"Well," replied the son, "let me give you a demonstration. How many chickens are on that dish, father?"

"Two," said the old man.

"Well," said John, "I can prove there are three." Then he stuck his fork in one and said: "That is one, isn't it?"

"Yes," said the father.

"And this is two," sticking his fork in the second.

"Yes," replied the father, again.

"Well, don't one and two make three?" replied John, triumphantly.

"Well, I declare!" said the father. "You have learned things at college. Well, another," continued the old man, to his wife. "I will give you one of the chickens to eat, and I'll take the other, and John can have the third. How is that, John?"—Judge's Library.
