

STREET 'NUISANCES' MUST GO

Doomed by Commercial Club as Active Agent of Business.

STREET SIGNS LEAD THE WAY

Opposition to These Unsanitary Things Awakened Feeling Against the List of Street Signs Condemned.

Cleanliness is next to Godliness—now is the time to get next.

No more will the "baiting" wagon be seen on the streets of Omaha: No more will smoking chestnut roasters keep the fingers of the vendors warm and fill their pockets with money...

Members of the city council have asked the business men to exert their influence to abolish the street food peddlers and the vendors of fruit, who sell immense amounts from the push cart stands.

The success of the Commercial club and Real Estate exchange in securing opposition to the advertising street signs has led members of the city council to believe the streets of Omaha, as granted by the business men and women interested in the cleanliness of the city, have the power to assist them in abolishing many things which are considered next to nuisances by some of the city fathers.

"The fruit wagons are a detriment to the legitimate fruit dealers who own property in Omaha and pay high rent for clean stores," said an official of the Commercial club. "We will take up the matter and believe that the carts, chestnut roasters and street car restaurants will go along with the street advertising signs which will not be an impossibility in Omaha, Germans picked from the streets by the wind are whirled over the fruit carts and deposited among the wares of the vendors and disease microbes are born in bunches of five."

The Commercial club may look into the matter of new street signs, without advertising matter of any kind, and offer suggestions to the city council as to the kind of signs which should be erected. The club is decidedly in favor of neat and lasting street name signs and believes they are a necessity which cannot be overlooked by a first class city.

M'CURBER PLAN IS OPPOSED

Federal Inspection of Grain Not Wanted in This City.

M'VANN TELLS WHY IT IS BAD

No Demand, in First Place, and Business is Not Centralized, Says Secretary of the Omaha Exchange.

Federal inspection of grain will be opposed to the last ditch by the grain interests of Omaha and other primary markets, according to the officers of the Grain Exchange, who have watched Senator McVann of North Dakota fighting for ten years to get a law through congress providing for inspection by the Department of Agriculture.

In his opinion there is no demand and no need for federal inspection of grain under domestic commerce, said E. J. McVann, secretary of the Omaha Grain exchange. "Such a measure will be opposed by the grain trade and by the states which have well organized systems of grain inspection among their Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Missouri and Kansas."

"Federal inspection will be opposed by the grain trade because we all know the business is not centralized as is the meat packing business, and it would require a vast army of inspectors to scatter them selves over the country and inspect even a small part of the grain. Experienced men would be hard to get. They are scarce as is. The government would be compelled to educate them, and the education comes largely through experience. Some of our inspectors in Omaha have been in the grain business for twenty and twenty-two years, while few inspectors are at work who have had less than ten to fifteen years' experience."

NELSON MORRIS WILL PROVED

Total Amount of Bonds of the Three Executors is Placed at $7,800,000.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—The will of the late Nelson Morris, former head of the packing company which bears his name, was admitted to probate and proved in court today.

The bonds of the three executors were fixed at $7,800,000, twice the estimated value of the personal estate placed under their control.

The value of the real estate involved was not considered in fixing the bonds. The executors are Mrs. Sarah Morris, the widow, and Edward and Ira N. Morris, sons.

Words of Want Wisdom.

When you want work do you ask for it, or do you try to hide away from it? Do you go where work is to be had, or where there isn't any.

When you advertise where nobody expects you to, or where the people who want work don't always look for help?

Knocked Out—We attended the York-Omaha foot ball battle the other day. Where The Honey Comes From.—Mrs. S. T. Mapps met us at their mail box last Friday with about five pounds of very nice clear honey, saying that S. T. had removed some of their bedroom floor and taken 16 pounds of good honey from a strong colony quartered between the floor and ceiling of the cellar, which is plastered overhead. She said they had left plenty of honey to winter the bees, which will be allowed to remain, as they had gone in and out so peacefully that no annoyance was experienced. It is wonderful how wisely persistent the busy little bee is. We saw a place Sunday where our son said the end of the granary between weather board and inside lining was completely filled from bottom to top with honey.—York Republican.
